POLL IN SENATE SHOWS ONLY 11 AGAINST TREATY

Vote Expected Today or Tomorrow.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—With a final effort by the opposition to attach conditions to the resolution of ratification, the fight against the navy limitation treaty that has raged in the senate for the last fortnight will come to an end tomorrow or Tuesday.

Administration leaders expect the final vote by tomorrow night unless discussion of the Walsh resolution, declaring for construction of the ships allowed us by the treaty, should become protracted, in which event a vote would not be reached until the next day.

Eleven May Vote No.

The treaty will be approved with only 11 votes against, according to a poll made by Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader of the senate. The 11 senators are:

Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], Royal S. Copeland [Dem., N. Y.], Frederick Hale [Rep., Me.], Hiram W. Johnson [Rep., Cal.], Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.], George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], Tasker L. Oddie [Rep., Nev.], Key Pittman [Dem., Nev.], Arthur R. Robinson [Rep., Ind.], Henrik Shipstead [Farmer-Labor, Minn.], Elmer Thomas [Dem., Okla.].

Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], Robert M. La Follette [Rep., Wis.], and a dozen others stated they would vote against the treaty if the Norris reservation should be defeated. Thereupon the administration hastened to accept this reservation, which declares that the senate ratifies the treaty with the understanding that there is no secret agreement affecting its terms.

Walsh May Be Opposed.

A twelfth vote against the treaty may be forthcoming from Senator David I. Walsh [Dem., Mass], who offered the resolution declaring for building our navy up to the tonnage limits provided by the treaty. He said he would vote against the pact unless his resolution were adopted.

"My resolution," said Senator Walsh tonight, "provides in substance that in connection with the ratification of this treaty we say to the American people who are not pacifists and who are not militarists, 'We have curbed the militarists by putting a limit upon what they can expend and build; but we have not left you, after legalizing the right of other nations to have powerful navies, in the hands of those who may reduce our navy through negligence or lulled belief in our security without adequate protection to an inferiority that makes our position much worse than before this treaty was negotiated.'

Sees Advantage for Others.

"Just what does this treaty do? It legalizes the right of other nations to have a definite combat naval strength. I maintain that if the nations build to that combat naval strength and we fail to do it we are guilty of the highest degree of negligence.

"The London treaty seeks to protect the world against the excesses of militant statesmen, but there is no protection against pacifism carried to the extent of imperiling our security unless we establish, as other countries have done, an actual combat parity."

Johnson in Parting Broadside.

In a parting broadside at the London treaty Senator Johnson asserted tonight as a result of its terms we shall go into the next naval conference relatively worse off than we were at the opening of the London conference.

"We find," he said, "that the ratio which we will have upon entering the forthcoming conference of 1935 will be worse for the United States than the ratio we had in 1930, when we went into the London conference. I will give you these figures again. On entering the London conference the status quo ratio in auxiliary tonnage built and building, combining the three categories of cruisers, destroyers, and submarines, which constitute all of the categories upon which a limitation was placed at London, was 10 for the United States, 11 for Great Britain, and 7.2 for Japan. This ratio will be so elevated for the other countries and correspondingly reduced for the United States under the terms of this treaty in 1935 that when the new conference meets the status quo ratio in these categories will be 10 for the United States, 12 for Great Britain, and 8 for Japan."

U. S. SWELTERS FROM ROCKIES TO EAST COAST

Sunstroke Kills Four Here; Eight Drown.

As Nation Swelters

Following are some of the maximum official temperatures recorded in the widespread heat wave yesterday:

Washington	106	Peoria	102
New York	92	Springfield, Ill.	98
Philadelphia	98	Des Moines	102
Pittsburgh	98	Davenport	98
Cincinnati	102	Dodge City, Kas.	102
Cleveland	98	Kansas City	100
Evansville, Ind.	100	Omaha	102
Grand Rapids, Mich.	100	St. Louis	100
Indianapolis	100	Green Bay, Wis.	94

Under the concerted onset of a broiling sun and a scorching southwest wind, Chicago and the country generally from the Rockies to the eastern seaboard sweltered through another day of record breaking heat yesterday.

The local maximum temperature was 99 degrees, two points below Saturday's record of 101, but the difference was scarcely perceptible to the man on the street. Readings above 100 were reported elsewhere in the central, eastern, and southern states.

Predicts Shower for Today.

With four persons killed by sunstroke, dozens prostrated, and eight drowned in the Chicago area, including an uncle and nephew pitched out of a rowboat, the weather forecast last night promised probable relief in the form of a shower or thunderstorm some time today. The temperature will return to its normal range in the 70s by tomorrow, according to the government observer, C. A. Donnel.

First evidence of an impending break in the heat wave of three days' duration came in an Associated Press dispatch from St. Paul reporting that a severe wind and rain storm had struck central Minnesota yesterday. The heavy rain was general in the vicinity of St. Cloud, Long Prairie and Milaca, but spent its force before reaching the Twin cities.

Dies in Ball Park Line.

The first of yesterday's heat victims in Chicago was Edward Ludwig, 46 years old, a porter of 648 West Madison street. Standing in line before the ticket window at Comiskey baseball park, he suddenly reeled and fell. The physician who pronounced him dead blamed the heat.

Herbert Walter, 30 year old laborer of 5103 Wentworth avenue, had been querulous about the heat for three days, his father said. Walter lay down for an afternoon nap yesterday. His father found him dead at supper time and called a physician, who attributed the death to the heat.

The other heat victims were Frank Gillespie, 72 year old barber, who was stricken on the sunny front porch of his home, 2135 Bissell street, and died at the county hospital, and Michael Piscitello, 36 year old laborer of 1519 Otto street, who entered his home mopping his brow and died a moment after sinking on a lounge.

Two Drowned, Five Rescued.

Alfred Cuykendall, 38 years old, a credit man of 1141 South Harvey avenue, Oak Park, and his 14 year old nephew, Howard Bong, 5245 Pensacola avenue, were drowned when the rowboat they had taken out on Lake Catherine, west of Antioch, was capsized as two others in the craft rose to exchange seats. Howard's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bong, and three others in the boat, were rescued by other boaters on the lake.

The heat drove a record crowd estimated at 865,000 to the lake beaches, 200,000 visiting Oak street beach alone. Other drownings and water accident deaths, only one of which occurred at a municipal beach, were the following:

Raymond D. Grave, 17 years old, 519 24th avenue, Bellwood. He died in the Westlake Memorial hospital, Melrose Park, of a broken neck, suffered when he dove into a shallow pool in Bemis creek in the forest preserve near Brookfield.

Martin Bosick, 45 years old, who lived at a camp of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company at Lemont. He became exhausted swimming in a quarry pool two miles east of Lemont and was drowned.

Conrad Rehn, 27 years old, Norway, Mich. On a picnic along the lake shore north of Waukegan, with his sister, Mrs. C. J. Johnson, 2435 Rosemont avenue. He waded into the lake to scoop up a pot of water for coffee. Swept off his feet by the undertow and unable to swim he was carried into deep water and drowned.

PATCHMORE DISCUSSES INDUSTRIAL SITUATION

Noted Authority on Unemployment Expresses Views Pro and Con on Tight Money, Commodity Prices and Modern Bathing Suits.

After sweltering in the furnace-like heat that swept in over the baking prairies and corn lands, a sudden shift of wind brought a refreshing coolness from the lake. The gasping city breathed again. Flags on the serried towers along the water front snapped in the breeze, summery frocks fluttered interestingly, and Grant park, with its broad geometric stretches of green and its great splashing fountain, was a picture of loveliness. There was but one jarring note.

There was but one jarring note.

Mr. J. Raglan Patchmore was seated on a park bench trying to establish a bench sitting endurance record. He had been sitting there off and on for several days, practically ever since he had hurried into the city to escape an epidemic of harvest activity out in the farming districts. He was still somewhat shaken by his narrow escape.

Mr. Patchmore had decided not to make his bench sitting contest a nonstop performance, for there were occasions when he found it necessary to go over along the busy marts of trade to do his refueling.

He was now face to face with this need, for it had been nearly two hours since he had last refueled and a look of wistful melancholy had settled upon such parts of his face not otherwise occupied.

He was between the horns of a dilemma. Either he must walk all the way across to Michigan avenue, a distance of nearly a block, or else sit here and suffer the pangs of unrequited love for food and drink.

It was at this critical moment in his life that he was discovered by a newspaper scribe who was out walking his dogs, both of which had been fretting him since the great war.

"Why, Mr. Patchmore!" he exclaimed. "I thought you were somewhere else. I didn't realize you were here until the wind changed. However, now that you are here, perhaps you can give me an item on the industrial situation as you have observed it."

"Well, for one thing," said Mr. Patchmore, "money is very tight. That's the one thing I have noticed with acute alarm, verging on panic," and then he added hopefully, "and I defy you to prove to me that money isn't tight."

After a breathless pause and a slight shift in the financial center of the universe, Mr. Patchmore proceeded more buoyantly.

He pulled out a flagrant cigar and relighted it.

"Things are looking up, however, and I venture the prophecy that there soon will be an upturn in commodity activities." He allowed a rapt glance to drift over to a near-beer parlor which advertised the nearest beer in town.

"How did you find the general business situation in your travels?"

"Well," said the noted Apostle of Physical Inertia as he pulled out a flagrant cigar and relighted it, "I found there has been a falling off in railway passenger traffic wherever I have been. First there was a falling off down near Peoria, then another near Joliet, and the last one out at 108th street."

"There has been a falling off in railway passenger traffic."

"How about unemployment? How does that strike you?"

"Practically the same. Wherever I go there is unemployment. Formerly I had very little competition in this field, but now I find fierce rivalry by a lot of inexperienced amateurs, who have reduced my personal relief work from an index figure of 100 to a fraction under 6. We had another such depression in 1921, when I went through a period of drastic deflation, but the deflation now is more extreme." He tightened up his belt six or seven notches. "Take, for example,

"Wherever I go there is unemployment."

the demand for commodities, especially such farm products as cheese and crackers. I find the demand is still as great, if not greater, but the purchasing power has declined to a minimum. The supply does not equal the demand."

In an effort to divert the conversation to a lighter theme, the scribe sharpened a couple more pencils and inquired:

"What do you think of the new bathing suits worn, or partly worn, by the younger set?"

"I can't speak with authority. One time I inadvertently approached a bathing beach and a squad of police was hastily summoned to drive me three miles away from the beach. It was the only good turn the police ever did for me. However, I think the prevailing style is bad for the wool industry and the textile manufacturers. Somebody once said that it took the wool of two sheep, working overtime for a year, to provide material for a bathing suit. Now it only takes two silk worms working one Sunday afternoon to provide the necessary material. Naturally, this is a severe blow to the wool and textile business."

A police drive.

Mr. Patchmore then hurried away to make his refueling contact and again Grant park was a picture of loveliness.

Princess Gets a Kick in Trial for Air Honor

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Out at Curtiss flying field a new rule went into effect yesterday. Hereafter parachutists must present testimonials of their record before they are permitted to jump for money or fame or whatever it is that parachutists jump for. Here's the reason:

Princess Red Feather, a comely Indian maiden, came to Chicago from Texas with aspirations to a set a new world's parachute jumping record. She hunted up Maj. R. W. [Shorty] Schroeder, manager of the field, and told him he might call her "Teddy" if he thought the title "Princess" was too formal. And she asked him for the loan of a plane and the use of Curtiss field for making her attack on the parachute altitude record.

Of Course, She's Jumped.

"Have you ever jumped before?" Schroeder wanted to know.

"O, yes," replied the princess. "Many times. I've been jumping for several years. I've jumped all over Texas."

"Well, princess, have you got a rough idea of how many times you've jumped?" asked the weatherbeaten airman, who once held the altitude record for airplanes.

"No," replied the princess [or Teddy, if you think princess is too formal]. "I've jumped so many times I can't remember the number."

Start for Trial Jump.

So Schroeder called in Jimmy Van Cise, who knows about airplanes and parachutes and people who use them, and told him to try the princess out. He took the door off a cabin plane and, with another pilot at the controls, took off with the princess for the trial jump. It would be nothing short of insulting, thought Jimmy, to caution a professional jumper to leap, count five, pull the rip cord, and wait.

Two thousand feet up Jimmy jerked a thumb toward the doorway of the plane and shouted:

"O. K., princess. Get out."

There was nothing suspicious in the casual way in which the princess got up and stood at the door of the plane. But when she pulled the rip cord as she stood there peering down, Jimmy realized for the first time that she was a novice.

Princess Changes Her Mind.

"Cripes!" he shouted to the pilot. "She's never jumped before. Watch out!"

Princess Red Feather had changed her mind. Looking down at the earth 2,000 feet away she decided not to jump. But the 'chute opened in a split second. Yards and yards of white silk cloth, caught in the blast from the propellor, spread out in the cabin and more of it spilled outside where the shroud lines threatened to catch in the tail controls of the plane. The ship started to perform crazy didos. A tangle in the controls would have meant a crash and possible death.

Princess Gets Help.

So Jimmy restored the princess' determination for her. He scrambled through the billowy cloth and unloosed a spirited kick in the direction of the door, precipating the princess and her parachute out into the air. She landed a few minutes later, a little abruptly, in a cloud of dust.

"Princess," said Schroeder as he helped her out of a tangle of shroud lines, "you'd better lay off airplanes and parachutes and things like that. Birch bark canoes—that's the stuff for you. Ambition is a thing that little girls should shun."

DERBY LOTTERY WARRANT OUT FOR MATT FOLEY

He Dodges Justice, Police Charge.

Matt Foley, assistant circulation manager for the Chicago Herald and Examiner, is a fugitive from justice, according to the records of the Felony court presided over by Judge John Sbarbaro. He is one of three men named in conspiracy warrants pending in that court in connection with a lottery advertised as the "Mid-West $25,000 Kentucky Derby Sweepstakes."

H. Goodman, another employé of the Herald and Examiner circulation department, and Leo Schoemer are the others named in the conspiracy warrants, which have been pending since June 27. Goodman and Schoemer have given bond for their appearance for trial on July 25, but Foley is dodging the police, or at least the police so report. He has not been served with his warrant, although it was issued at the same time as those against Goodman and Schoemer.

Charges Against the Three.

Foley and his associates, according to the charges made in court, failed to pay out on their racket. It is charged they did not pay a capital prize of $10,000 to the person holding a ticket on the winner of the Kentucky Derby.

The poster advertising the "sweepstakes" also announced prizes of $5,000 down to $100 for persons holding tickets for horses coming in from second to twelfth place, as well as an award of $50 each for every person holding a ticket on each horse which actually ran in the Derby.

The tickets were sold for 50 cents each and one man held a ticket bearing the number 113,455.

The arrangement was later changed, it is reported, when Foley conceived the plan of issuing 50,000 tickets and agreeing to pay a premium to those holding tickets on a horse which actually started in the Derby. These tickets, it is reported, all bore the name of Dick O'Hara, considered a lowly plater, not of Derby class, and a horse which would not start in the race. But Foley reckoned without Dick O'Hara's owner, Pat Joyce, wealthy railroad official. Dick O'Hara did run; he came in last.

Walsh Takes Up Case.

Michael C. Walsh, Democratic nominee for congress in the Second district, who has interested himself in behalf of at least 72 employés of the Illinois Central railroad who hold winning tickets, told yesterday of his efforts to bring about the prosecution of Foley or to see that those holding winning tickets get what they were promised.

"The Illinois Central employés were sold tickets through Schoemer," said Walsh. "Goodman, who is a driver for the Herald and Examiner, made the contact with Schoemer. I would estimate that 5,000 tickets at 50 cents each were sold to these railroad employés.

"At first 48 men holding winning tickets on which they were unable to collect came forward and complained. Now I have 72 such tickets. We took the case to State's Attorney Swanson after we had appealed to officials of the Herald and Examiner, who Goodman had said were backing the lottery.

Tells of Talk with Guck.

"A delegation went to see Homer Guck, publisher of the Herald and Examiner, and I acted as spokesman. Mr. Guck called for Duffy Cornell, now circulation manager of the paper, on the telephone and he came up with two typewritten statements.

"Cornell handed the statements to Mr. Guck, who then handed them to me. After I read them I handed them around to the various members of the delegation. The first statement called for the resignation of Foley as assistant circulation manager. The second statement disavowed any connection of the Herald and Examiner with the lottery plan.

"We were to return the second day to see Mr. Guck and when we did he would not see us. Instead we saw Cornell, who said any employé connected with the lottery would be kicked out. He said that he was sorry this happened and that he had fired Foley the night before."

To Ask Subpoena for Cornell.

Mr. Walsh said that when the case comes up for hearing in court on July 25 he will ask that a subpoena be issued for Cornell so that he might tell under oath what he knows about the lottery. Cornell until recently was city editor of the Herald and Examiner, but was transferred to the circulation department.

The court records show that the

LEAVE DOOR OPEN FOR HEAT RELIEF; HOME IS HELD UP

The apartment of Dr. Christopher S. O'Neill at 4740 Drexel boulevard was stuffy last night when Dr. O'Neill, his wife and two daughters, Betty, 17 years old, and June, 11, returned from a loop theater with their guests, former Ald. Stanley S. Walkowiak of the 31st ward and his wife.

"Let's leave the front door open and see if that won't help cool the place off," suggested one of the party.

Ten minutes later two armed men, their faces masked with handkerchiefs, marched in and took three rings valued at $1,500 from Mrs. Walkowiak and a $2,500 diamond from her husband. Mrs. O'Neill saved her jewelry by tossing it behind a divan. The others in the party were not molested.

Walkowiak followed the bandits as they ran to the street. When they drove away he shouted "Robbers!" Policeman Richard Greenwood of Hyde Park station heard him and gave chase in a commandeered car, but lost sight of the bandits at Hyde Park boulevard.

Walkowiak, an attorney, resides at 1310 Cornell avenue.

BEAR (GENUINE) GIVES GIRL AND COPS A THRILL

Miss Lillian Wiegrase, 22 years old, employed at the Westward Ho Golf club, near Wolf road and North avenue, was leaving for home yesterday when she encountered a black bear near the entrance of the grounds. Miss Wiegrase fled to the clubhouse and a squad of Melrose Park policemen, led by Sergt. Louis Boni, went bear hunting. After they had killed the animal Paul Rausch, 116 North 32d avenue, Melrose Park, called up to learn whether anybody had seen his pet bear Hank, who had wandered away.

KNOCK WOMAN DOWN, STEAL HER $10,000 IN STOCK

Two young purse snatchers knocked down a woman at Jackson boulevard and Throop street last night and escaped with her handbag containing stock certificates valued at $10,000. The victim, Mrs. Mary F. Ryan, a widow, who lives at 1239 Jackson boulevard, got the securities recently and she intended to deposit them in a bank today. Not wanting to risk having them taken by burglars from her home, she took them with her when she went out to visit a friend.

Lift Yoke on Saar, Plea of Hindenburg

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MAYENCE, July 20.—The walls of Mayence echoed and reëchoed with cheers and songs all day today. It was a day of thanksgiving for the liberation of the Rhineland, which the last of the French troops left on June 30, after more than eleven years of occupation. President von Hindenburg participated and the crowds saw him at church, in festive halls, and on the streets.

The happy Rhinelanders listened in the town hall to one of the longest speeches of President von Hindenburg's career, where he extolled "the strength of soul and will power, which enabled the united people of the occupied provinces to help bring about their own liberation."

"Mastered Own Fate."

"The people of the Rhine mastered their own fate," he said, as the audience cheered.

In his address the old warrior stressed that Germany has yet to recover her full sovereignty.

"Now that the foreign occupation and the unavoidable friction, which it entailed, is over, the time is nearer when the idea of self-determination of nations and of equal rights for all can gain ground," he said. "We still do not have equal rights with other nations. The occupied provinces are still subject to ordinances restricting the rights and self-determination of Germany's sovereignty. The Saar is still separated from the fatherland.

"These people of the Saar region, who stood fast under a foreign yoke, deserve Germany's gratitude. The reunion of the district to Germany is the best guarantee of peace in Europe."

"World Owes Us Equal Rights."

Foreign Minister Julius Curtius was another speaker.

"The world owes us equal rights among nations," he exclaimed. "We are happy over the peaceful victory Germany has gained through the evacuation, not only for the sake of Germany and her peaceful future, but also for the sake of Europe. Peace is safest in Europe when there are no oppressed nations."

Age old enemies, the men of the "Steel Helmet," a war veterans' organization, the Socialists and the "Reichsbanner" stood side by side, but without their uniforms, in Mayence and along the road to Wiesbaden. Together they raised their voices in admiration of "our president." Late in the evening, after the songs and the wine had heated their enthusiasm, some of the celebrators engaged in a few free-for-all fist fights.

At Wiesbaden Gen. von Hindenburg was acclaimed by 2,000 school children in light blue, green, red, and yellow costumes, who took part in a pageant, "The Free Rhine." They sang songs they had learned in Gen. von Hindenburg's honor until he sped away to the estate of Baron Langwerth von Simmern, the German commissioner for the former occupied regions.

Tomorrow he will go to Kreuznach, his war time headquarters.

GOTHAM SKYSCRAPER WILL BE 102 STORIES HIGH INSTEAD OF 84

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—Revised plans for the Empire State building under construction on the old Waldorf-Astoria hotel site, call for a structure of 102 stories instead of 84, plus an observation tower, as originally planned.

It now will rise 1,248 feet above Fifth avenue, an addition of 260 feet called for in the plans making the structure just 72 feet short of a quarter of a mile high.

Plans for this addition to the top of the building was announced today by former Gov. Al Smith, in charge of the building operations. It was necessary also to provide for the mooring mast and air ship terminal by which transoceanic passengers on the Zeppelin airliners of the future, it is hoped, will be able to embark and disembark in the heart of the city.

New York, July 20.—(AP)—Twenty-five persons were injured tonight in a panic when a fuse blew out in the first car of a crowded elevated train in Brooklyn. The train was jammed with persons returning home from Coney Island. A sheet of flame went along the top of the car, filling it with heavy smoke. Women and girls fainted and were trampled in the rush for the exits. Physicians treated 24 persons carried to the station platform.

case originally started as a misdemeanor charge against Schoemer and Goodman on the accusation of operating a lottery. Then the connection of Foley became known and the charges were changed to conspiracy and Foley was made a defendant.

Clyde M. Hoffman, 14906 Marshfield avenue, Harvey, until recently a flagman for the Illinois Central, is the complaining witness in all three warrants, which were issued by Judge Joseph L. McCarthy.

Hoffman, an employé of the railroad for fourteen years, had been named chairman of a grievance committee of his fellow workers and as such instituted the prosecution.

Hoffman's Story of Case.

"On our first visit to the Hearst building we were admitted to Mr. Guck's office on the eighth floor," Hoffman said. "With me, besides Mr. Walsh, were six or seven of the railroad men, all members of the committee.

"When Mr. Guck called Cornell by telephone, Cornell came in without a word, laid two statements on the desk and walked out. The statements were passed among us and, as I recall, the first was a notification that Foley was discharged and the second an order to the editor to print in the Herald and Examiner the next morning a full account of Foley's operations, an announcement that he was discharged, and a statement that the Herald and Examiner was in no way connected with the enterprise.

"We were surprised the next morning when we got the Herald and Examiner and found no reference to the Foley matter. The men felt they were being imposed upon and that afternoon Mr. Walsh and I went back to demand an explanation from Mr. Guck.

Says Cornell Made Threats.

"Mr. Guck wouldn't see us, but Cornell did. He seemed annoyed that we came back and finally when I told him our men had been cheated and wanted restitution, he made threats. Cornell said that if I didn't stay away from the Hearst building and drop the prosecution some of the Herald and Examiner higherups would find out from the Illinois Central officials why the railroad men were continually pestering the Herald and Examiner. He said he would get my job."

Hoffman appeared against Foley and his associates on June 26. That night he was discharged with the explanation, he said, that his superiors had learned of a garnishment against him.

At the Chicago headquarters of the Illinois Central last night it was said that Hoffman was under the jurisdiction of the superintendent at Champaign, Ill. Hoffman's dismissal came upon an order from Champaign that he be dropped from the pay rolls pending investigation of him, the railroad said.

Others Drawn In, Walsh Says.

Mr. Walsh has been informed, he said, that many employés of the Western Electric company had been drawn into the same lottery as the Illinois Central men. Some of these had requested him to represent them, Mr. Walsh said, but he refused, suggesting they engage an attorney as the railroad men had done. Attorney Elmer J. Walsh is representing the railroad workers.

By using newsboys and circulation drivers of the Herald and Examiner, Foley was able to spread his lottery tickets all over the city and suburbs, according to Mr. Walsh's information.

STATE CONCEALS FOSTER; AWAITS LINGLE EVIDENCE

Questioning of Gangster Goes On in Secret.

$55,825 IN REWARDS.

Rewards totaling $55,825 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter. Of the $25,000 reward offered by The Tribune, $10,000 will be paid to any person who will give confidential information identifying the slayer of Lingle. All information should be sent to the headquarters established by State's Attorney Swanson in Room 503 Temple building, 77 West Washington street. Telephone State 3729.

Proceedings today involving Frank Foster, former owner of the revolver with which Alfred Lingle, TRIBUNE reporter, was killed, were dependent last night on the outcome of secret questioning of the suspect who was brought back from California on Saturday.

Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's office had Foster in custody at a place where he could not be found, even by Attorney Harold L. Levy, who had been retained to represent the Moran-Aiello gangster. It was understood that unless Foster gave definite information regarding his disposition of the revolver he would be held for trial on the indictment naming him as one of the murderers of Lingle.

Rathbun Report Recalled.

It was recalled that in a recent report of Assistant State's Attorney Charles F. Rathbun to State's Attorney Swanson Rathbun said that one "guilty man" was under arrest and indictment. It was believed he was referring to Foster despite the general assumption that there was no evidence linking Foster with the actual slaying, his connection being merely that of the purchaser of the revolver which was dropped beside Lingle's body.

Attorney Levy, who with his partner, Attorney Emmet F. Byrne, made a record as a prosecutor under the previous state's attorney, said he cannot announce his plans until after he has a talk with Foster. He said he expects no difficulty in being allowed to talk to his client.

Four Term Law Discussed.

One possibility was that if Foster refused to give the prosecutors any assistance he would be held for trial without bail and kept in the county jail. If he is so held and he demands trial at four successive terms of court he could force the state to try him within four months or dismiss the indictment, it was pointed out.

Attorney Levy, in that event, he said, would have the opportunity of filing a petition with the chief justice of the Criminal court asking that Foster be admitted to bail. In such a case he would allege that the presumption of guilt is not great, the proof is not evident and the burden would be on the state to prove the contrary or allow the petitioner to go free on bail. Such procedure was invoked years ago in a murder trial, the stated purpose having been to force the state to reveal its evidence.

State's Position Outlined.

Roche's attitude was understood to be that Foster could save himself a lot of trouble by talking freely. The state's position is that with ownership of the murder gun traced to Foster, his membership in the Moran gang and his flight from Chicago would be sufficient to justify his being held for trial without bail.

Foster endeavored to set up an alibi when he was given a hearing in Los Angeles on his habeas corpus plea to escape extradition. He declared he had left Chicago before the Lingle murder, but couldn't prove it, and the contrary testimony was that he departed two days after Lingle was shot down.

The Chicago police were waiting yesterday for a report from the police of Michigan City on the identity of a man who died in a hospital there under strange circumstances. Death was due to pernicious anemia. Physicians had advised the victim that blood transfusion would be necessary to save his life.

It was reported that the patient and a woman companion at first discussed the advisability of asking "Ed" to come from Chicago and give blood, but decided not to do so. The assumption was that the dying man wanted to avoid the police and that "Ed" was a Chicago gangster.

At the detective bureau the possibility was being considered that the dead man was Frank McErlane.

OLD BREWERY CLOCK WAVES ITS HANDS, SO COPS FIND 31 STILLS

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—Over on the landscaped banks of the East river in Sutton place, where such folks as Anne Morgan, Rodman Wanamaker II., and William K. Vanderbilt make their homes, there are 31 missing stills tonight. The police have them.

The raid in the heart of the fashionable district was caused by the curious behavior of a tower clock in the neighborhood. The "Big Ben" was mounted over a former brewery that had grown into a garage, and while everything else about the place was apparently dead the clock showed signs of animation, wiggling its hands and telling everything but the time.

The police dropped in to look and left the garage with 31 stills, fifteen of them of 5,000 gallon capacity each and the others of various lesser capacities. No arrests have been made, but the stills will be turned over to prohibition authorities tomorrow.

3 Charged with Looting Sum of $40,000 in Goods

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—Three employés of the Newark, N. J., store of Sears, Roebuck & Co., who are alleged to have looted the store of $40,000 worth of clothing, automobile accessories, and other stock, over a period of seven months, were arrested today in Newark charged with grand larceny. They were: Frank Rosenthal, John T. Ryan, and Frank Brenner.

A few hours later Abe Segal, an official in a Newark employment agency, was arrested charged with receiving stolen goods. He is alleged to have acted as "fence" for the other three and to have helped them dispose of their loot.

Member of Byrd's Crew Arrested as Bigamist

New York, July 20.—(AP)—Claire Deitrich, 32, who as Claire Alexander was a member of the Byrd south pole expedition, was arrested here tonight on warrants obtained by his wife in Reading, Pa., charging him with bigamy and nonsupport. Police said Mrs. Deitrich recognized her husband under his assumed name from published pictures.

AGENCIES UNITE TO TRY 7 FOR NEGRO SLAYING

Atlanta, Ga., July 20.—(AP)—Police, the solicitor-general, a private committee and the commission on interracial coöperation joined today to prosecute seven white men charged with slaying a Negro college student and to curb reputed activities against Negroes growing out of the case.

The student, Dennis Hubert, was killed June 15, on the playground of a Negro school after a group of white men accused him of having insulted a white woman." The solicitor-general's office says it had evidence that Hubert was ignorant of the accusation. Six men, J. C. Gravin, Tom Berryman, T. F. Martin, Aubrey Sikes, Murray W. Harmon, and R. H. Evans are in jail charged with the slaying. "Fat" Wilson is at liberty under the same charge. The trial will open Tuesday before Judge Earl Camp.

Since the arrest of the white men the house of the student's father, the Rev. G. J. Hubert, has been assaulted, also the Sisters' chapel at Spellman college has been stoned and a meeting in a Negro church to raise funds for the prosecution was disturbed.

BABY, 8 MONTHS OLD; BOY, 5, DIE IN AUTO CRASHES

Novice Driver Held After Wheaton Smashup.

An 8 month old baby and a 5 year old child were killed in automobile accidents in the Calumet region yesterday.

The baby, Elizabeth Tomachini, lost her life when the car in which she was riding with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Tomachini of East Gary, collided with the automobile of Harvey Newman, 828 Harrison street, Gary, at 19th and Harrison streets, Gary. Newman was not held after witnesses told the police he was not to blame for the accident.

Train Crashes Into Auto.

Eugene Hansen, 5 years old, 425 Adams street, Gary, was killed and seven other persons were injured when the automobile in which all were passengers was struck by a Grand Trunk passenger train on the Torrence avenue crossing a block south of Oak Glen. Eugene's father, Ralph, 27 years old, was critically hurt.

The others injured are: Mrs. Ralph Hansen, 25 years old, the boy's mother; her two other children, Chester, 4 years old, and Lucy, 2; Howard Knott, 22 years old; his wife, Jane, 20, and his brother, James, 20. The two Knotts are brothers of Mrs. Hansen. All were taken to St. Margaret's hospital in Hammond.

The party was returning from a trip to Peotone. Witnesses said the car stalled on the track as the train approached and a front wheel became caught in a rail where the crossing is being repaired so that Hansen, who was driving, was unable to go ahead or back.

The Hansen boy's death increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 530.

Novice Driver in Smashup.

Charles Holas, 2507 South Grove avenue Berwyn, 46 years old, but just learning to drive, precipitated a smashup in Roosevelt road, near President street, in Wheaton, when he attempted to pass a car driven by Roy Hurd, 451 South Michigan street, Villa Park. Holas, cutting into traffic too abruptly, sideswiped Hurd's car, sending it into a ditch and against an elm tree.

Holas escaped injury. Hurd's skull was fractured and his hip broken. He is in a critical condition at the Elmhurst hospital. Holland Horten, 25 years old, 172 Menomonee street, Chicago, was cut and bruised.

Wheaton police arrested Holas, charging him with assault with a deadly weapon and criminal carelessness.

Boy Seriously Injured.

Frank Del Santo, 12 years old, 385 Oak street, Hammond, Ind., was seriously injured when the car in which he was riding with Emil Merino, 227 Florence street, Hammond, was forced into a ditch, near Ridge road and Maple lane, Thornton.

Mrs. Elma Steffen, 29 years old, 2952 North Kilpatrick avenue, died yesterday in the Lutheran Memorial hospital of injuries received in an automobile accident July 7 near Bridgman, Mich. An automobile in which she was riding with her husband, John, collided with another car.

BOYS REUNITED WITH SISTER AFTER SEARCH

Two small boys were reunited with their little sister in their mother's home in Chicago yesterday following an adventurous life upon Washington island, a wooded nose of land in Sturgeon bay, Wis. The boys are Junior, 5 years old, and Carl, 3, sons of Mrs. Elizabeth Lovig Anderson, 6553 Ingleside avenue, by a former husband.

Barratt O'Hara, counsel for Mrs. Anderson, revealed how the boys came to be on the island. Some time ago, Mr. O'Hara said, Mrs. Anderson divorced her husband. Later she placed the boys in the care of her former husband's aunt, Mrs. Cinna Wach, 4175 Nelson street, but kept Shirley Jane, 7 years old, the boys' sister, with her.

"Then the boys disappeared and after weeks of search were located at the home of Clyde Koyne, on Washing island," said Mr. O'Hara.

"Mrs. Anderson and I went up and brought them home."

Hinsdale Youth Drowns on Vacation in Canada

Carlyle MacHarg Jr., 22 years old, 305 South Garfield avenue, Hinsdale, was drowned on Thursday in Mountain lake, near Sudbury, Ont., where he was spending his vacation, it was learned last night. ONE SLAIN, 6 HURT IN MEXICAN VOTE RIOTS IN JUAREZ

El Paso, Tex., July 20.—(AP)—One man was shot to death, five others were stabbed, and a policeman was injured seriously today in rioting between members of the National Revolutionary party of Chihuahua and the Socialist party during a special state election in Juarez, Chihuahua, across the international boundary from El Paso. Martial law was established.

Juan Saldivar, 35, riding on a truck loaded with members of the National Revolutionary party, was shot by a man said to have been a Socialist party member. Saldivar died two hours later. Charged with demonstrating against the administration, 23 members of the Socialistic League of Resistance were jailed.

LAST MAN'S CLUB LAST MAN READY FOR LAST TOAST

Veteran to Quaff Wine Before Empty Chairs.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 20.—(AP)—A tired old man, unproud victor of a race against death, prepared tonight for the "hardest job" of his 87 years on Monday when he will go to Stillwater to drink a toast in old Burgundy wine with 33 crêpe draped but otherwise empty chairs as witnesses.

For this old civil war veteran, Charley Lockwood of Chamberlain, S. D., the task of dissolving the Last Man's club with a toast to his dead comrades will be dramatic labor for which he has no taste, he said today, while at the home of a son here seeking seclusion from the unwanted attentions which Monday's event has brought him.

When he arrives at Lowell inn at Stillwater, only a short distance away, Lockwood will call the roll and alone will make answer of the roster of 34 members the club had after its simple beginnings at a reunion 45 years ago.

Last Bottle Set Aside.

The 34 were survivors of Company B, First Minnesota Volunteer infantry, which lost most of its members at Gettysburg and at Bull Run. It was on July 21, 1885, the anniversary of the first battle at Bull Run, that the reunion was held on the ground now occupied by the inn and after hours of feasting the last bottle of wine was set aside to be drunk by the last man.

"Every member of the club thought he would be last and I did, too," Mr. Lockwood said. "After our experiences in that war—we all had four years of it together—we had no fear of death."

"To my comrades," Lockwood will address the toast and then he will repeat a short bit of verse—all provided for in the pattern for this final program by the club many years ago. After this he will drink the toast from the old bottle—wine which has taken on the taste of vinegar through the years as a curious member of the club found several years ago when he opened the bottle.

A sip and Lockwood's bond will be fulfilled and the club's destiny of dissolution will have been reached.

FALLS THREE FLOORS ON MARBLE PLATFORM WITHOUT BEING HURT

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—Riding half a ton of marble, William Garrity, 22, not only survived a fall through three hallway stair platforms from the top story of a 5-story Bronx apartment to the second floor, early today, but wound up as he started, standing upright, and only shaken up. One marble platform, giving way with him on it, carried away those on the two floors beneath it. The accident, which building inspectors were ordered to investigate, forced 17 families on the upper floors of the building to use fire escapes for stairways until a police emergency squad boarded over the stair platform openings.

KILL EX-CONVICT AS HE GRABS GUN AT KOKOMO, IND.

John Pullen, 37 years old, ex-convict with a Chicago police record, was shot to death early yesterday morning near Kokomo, Ind., by Sheriff Clifton Small of Howard county and Detective Otto Burkman of the Kokomo police department. They had gone to a farm, a mile east of town, where Pullen lived, to arrest him for a filling station holdup charge.

Warned, apparently, of their coming, Pullen was in his car, ready to leave, when they arrived. With him was a comely woman who gave the name of Mrs. Henry Becker. Pullen was sitting at the wheel. When ordered to put up his hands he reached for a gun, and both Small and Burkman opened fire. He was killed instantly.

The woman is being held on an auto banditry charge, which carries a minimum sentence of ten years in Indiana. She refused to talk about herself. Pullen had been paroled six months ago from Joliet, to which he had been committed three years ago for highway robbery here.

Only two persons—Woodrow Wilson's wife and their social secretary—knew what Wilson endured in Paris as he fought Clemenceau, Orlando and Lloyd George, with the world's fate at stake.

Each night the secretary, Edith Benham, wrote her fiancé, Admiral Helm, telling what the President that day had confided about the actors in that drama behind guarded doors. Intrigue ... spies ... secret treaties ... the things that broke his heart.

HOUSE REQUIRED TO REAPPORTION NEXT DECEMBER

Several States Will Gain, Others to Lose.

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—Completion of the 1930 census has provided the house of representatives with a difficult problem, that of deciding the number of its members and allocation of those members to the various states.

The house now has 435 members. This number in the reapportionment of 1910—the last made—was on the basis of one representative to each 211,877 citizens. There are now 31,420,948 more citizens in the country at large and the house seeks to give them some representation.

The house could, by its own vote, increase the number of those holding seats, but the sentiment is against that increase, on the ground that the membership already is so large that it is unwieldy for legislative purposes.

In the forthcoming congresses, unless the membership is increased, each member of the house from the more populous states will represent more than 275,000 persons.

Bitter Fight Expected.

Therefore the house probably will keep its total membership the same and try to reapportion them among the states, a procedure sure to bring a bitter fight, as some states would gain and others lose in numbers of their delegations.

The President will transmit to congress in the first week of the next session of congress in December, the population of each state and the number of representatives to which it would be entitled in an apportionment of 435 members by specified methods.

One of these methods is that known as "major fractions," which was employed in the existing apportionment of 1911. The other is the method known as that of equal proportions. The choice of these methods makes a difference of one member in certain instances.

If House Fails Census Acts.

Congress can reapportion on the basis of a house of 435 members or any other number. But if it fails to reapportion at the session, there will be an automatic reapportionment on the basis of a house of 435 members as provided for by the act of 1929. This reapportionment will be directed by the census bureau and not congress.

Should the house accept the "major fractions" system—the one now in force—the population of the whole country would be divided by 435, the house membership. Then the population of each state would be divided by this ratio figure, giving the number of representatives each state shall be allotted.

This major fractions system will cause some seeming injustice. For instance, Illinois, which has gained 1,991,692 population since the last reapportionment, would not increase its delegation of 27; but California, with a population gain of 3,264,733, would be entitled to an increase in its delegation from 11 to 20.

State Gains and Losses.

The probable gains and losses on the basis of the present membership in state delegations and the increases in population between the 1910 and 1930 censuses are shown in the following table prepared by the Associated Press:

States May Redistrict.

It will not be necessary for states which gain representatives to remap their congressional districts, though they usually do so. Additional representatives can be elected at large until a state is redistricted, as Illinois, with two members at large, has done since 1911. Of states having more than one member, Illinois is the only one that elects members at large at this time.

States losing representatives are compelled by circumstances to redistrict or else to elect the entire delegation at large. But whether a state does or does not redistrict is no concern of the federal government. Washington allots the membership and it is then up to the state to determine the manner of its election.

KILLS TWO, WOUNDS TWO WITH SHOTGUN; COMMITS SUICIDE

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 20.—(AP)—Two persons were shot dead and two others badly wounded in a shooting orgy last night and today, started by a suddenly crazed caretaker of a Lehman Heights estate here. The caretaker, Paul Skopka, after holding at bay a posse organized to hunt him down, reserved his last shotgun shell to kill himself.

The dead other than Skopka were: Harry D. Sordoni, 52, of Kingston, owner of the estate on which the shooting occurred, and a brother of State Senator A. J. Sordoni; Capt. John T. Ruth, 50, police chief and deputy sheriff, who was killed from ambush.

The wounded are: Frieda Sordoni, 17, daughter of Sordoni, shot in one arm as she fled in her automobile for assistance; Francis Sordoni, 31, son of the slain estate owner, shot in the leg as he went to his father's aid.

According to information supplied by Frieda and Francis Sordoni, members of the family were unpacking articles from their car at the Lehman Heights estate when Skopka suddenly appeared, carrying a double barreled shotgun, and, without warning, opened fire.

3 HELD FOR TRAIN CRASH AS 57 ARE HURT; 1 KILLED

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—Three men were charged with manslaughter this afternoon following a preliminary investigation of the wreck of a Pennsylvania express train near Elizabeth, N. J., Saturday night in which 58 persons were injured, one of whom died today.

John Craig of Brooklyn succumbed to a skull fracture and internal injuries in the Elizabeth General hospital. The three men held without bail are Arthur Allcroft of Elizabeth, a building contractor; his school teacher brother James, whose home is in Iowa, and William McNair of Elizabeth. The men will have a hearing in Elizabeth police court tomorrow morning.

The men were indicted by police as the occupants of the automobile which was driven onto the tracks a few seconds before the train bound from Philadelphia to New York crashed from the tracks at 10:40 p. m.

British Admiral's Daughter and Flyer Burn to Death

MAIDSTONE, Eng., July 20.—(AP)—Miss Gladys Grace, daughter of Rear Admiral Henry Grace of the British navy, and Lieut. Spencer, naval flyer, were burned to death today in an airplane crash at Detling airdome. Their airplane had risen only 200 feet from the field when the plane made a nose dive, bursting into flames as it struck the ground.

ROBS TELEGRAPH OFFICE, POSING AS A CUSTOMER

A middle aged man walked into a Western Union telegraph office at 1512 Madison street yesterday morning, scribbled a few words on a telegraph blank and handed it to Miss Rose McQuire, operator, who read:

"Want $25 only—quick."

"The name and address, please?" questioned the girl.

"Listen, girl, 25 bucks right now or out goes your light," growled the robber, drawing a revolver and pointing it at Miss McQuire.

As the girl stood trembling, staring at the revolver, the bandit turned the gun on Charles Coaker, another operator, and repeated the request. Coaker reached into a drawer where $400 was kept, carefully counted out $25 and handed it over to the man with the gun, who took it and walked leisurely out the door.

IT'S BAD YEAR FOR 3 SENATORS WHO BOLTED IN 1928

Simmons Beaten, Heflin and Norris in Trouble.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—It seems a bad year for senators who bolted their party presidential candidates in 1928.

All three of the bolting senators, two of them Democrats and one a Republican, have become involved in serious trouble in their efforts to obtain renomination and reëlection.

One of the three, Senator Furnifold M. Simmons [Dem., N. C.], boasting the longest continuous service record of any member of the senate, already has been defeated for renomination.

Once Considered Unbeatable.

Another, J. Thomas Heflin [Dem., Ala.], heretofore considered unbeatable, has been refused the right to run for renomination as a Democrat and is in danger of defeat as an independent candidate in November.

The third, Senator George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], for years a power in his own state and leader of the senate radical group, has just escaped being forced off the Republican primary ballot and finds himself confronted with formidable opposition in November if he is renominated next month.

The issue of party regularity has proved the principal trouble maker for all three senators. Senators Simmons and Heflin in the 1928 campaign refused to support Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic presidential nominee, while Senator Norris bolted Herbert Hoover, the presidential nominee of his party.

North Carolina Boss 30 Years.

Until Senator Simmons lent his aid to the Hoover cause in North Carolina, contributing to the Republican victory in that state, he had been for 30 years the undisputed boss of the Democratic party. Senator Simmons went down to defeat in the June 7 primaries at the hands of J. W. Bailey.

Senators Simmons and Heflin raised the prohibition and religious issues against Gov. Smith. Senator Norris, although classed as a dry, bolted the dry Hoover to take the stump for the wet Smith, justifying his action by the latter's stand on the "power trust" and other issues in which the radicals are interested.

J. H. LEWIS WARNS CHICAGO POLES OF U. S. ENEMIES

A warning against propagandists who would seek to undermine the government of this country was given to more than 35,000 Poles yesterday by James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic nominee for the United States senate, whose address was part of an all day program celebrating Polish day at Riverview park.

"Our current business complications and depressed financial state will put the patriotism of our foreign born citizen to a real test," said Mr. Lewis. "I beg you to remember that in all governments in all the history of the world what is passing now has ever passed before in the same way, and those who stood by the best institutions of freedom have received the most reward."

Athletic, folk dancing, mass drills, fireworks, choral sing and band music preceded the speaking program in the morning and early afternoon. Other speakers were Alexander Szczepanski, Polish consul, and John J. Olejniczak, president of the Polish Roman Catholic Union of America. August Kowalski is president of the Polish Day association.

HOPE TO SETTLE BABY MIXUP IN HOSPITAL TODAY

The dispute over the identity of the new born babies of Mrs. William Watkins and Mrs. Charles Bamberger continued without settlement yesterday, it being Sunday. But today Dr. Arnold Kegel, Chicago health commissioner, and his staff of physicians expect to try again to establish indisputably whether Mrs. Watkins and Mrs. Bamberger have the right babies.

The two mothers are both in the Englewood hospital. Dr. Charles Fair and Dr. P. A. Murphy, who brought the babies into the world, are now convinced that Mrs. Watkins' baby belongs to Mrs. Bamberger and vice versa. Various tests to establish their identity have so far failed. Today Dr. Kegel will try more tests.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

DISEASE SWEEPS OVER LENINGRAD; HUNDREDS DEAD

Bad Milk Is Blamed for Typhoid Epidemic.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, July 20.—Leningrad's sanitary facilities before the revolution and when the city was called Petrograd were the best in Russia. They have now fallen into a terrible condition, according to the Leningrad Pravda, which reports that besides typhus—spread by vermin—a typhoid epidemic is claiming the lives of hundreds weekly. Other contagious diseases are also prevalent.

A contaminated milk supply is blamed for the spread of typhoid, the Pravda states, adding that 85 per cent of Leningrad's milk supply is contaminated. The other 15 per cent, the newspaper declares, is bad milk, and pure milk has not been obtainable for a number of years.

Previously the city obtained its milk supply from Finland, whose dairy industry was once the model for all prewar Russia. Today Finland is independent, and dairy farming in the Leningrad district, to quote the Pravda, "is carried on under filthy and primitive surroundings." The Moscow milk supply is also steadily growing worse, and two of the largest cities in Russia have ordered their health departments to begin a "life-saving" campaign.

The Leningrad Krasnaija Gazette is advocating a cleanup drive, saying that the city smells like a pig pen, especially in the vicinity of the railroad stations, which have not been cleaned for weeks.

Newspapers are filled with letters from government employés, complaining that their fortnight vacations are mostly being spent in railway depots waiting their turns to board trains for points of contagion.

Health conditions in Russia are being carefully watched by the sanitary specialists of the Baltic states, who fear that there may be a sudden outbreak of some great plague. Both passengers and trains from Russia are inspected and fumigated at the frontiers, and persons infected with contagious diseases are turned back.

Boston Tries Lights to Direct Its Traffic Maze

Boston, Mass., July 20.—[Special.]—Boston today took the first step in harnessing its narrow, winding downtown streets to modern traffic lights. The lights, centrally operated and controlled from city hall, are so arranged that a motorist entering the downtown area anywhere "in step" with the lights can go through the entire area at a speed of 17½ miles an hour without slowing down or stopping. The speed may be increased later, but due to the nature of Boston's "cow path" street layout, 17 to 20 miles an hour probably will be the maximum speed allowed.

TRADE REVIVAL BY EARLY FALL IS FORESEEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—A revival of business by early fall is foreseen by the research department of the National Association of Credit Men, which released a special bulletin to its member firms throughout the country today urging them to maintain the strict credit discipline developed in recent months even after business "resumes its interrupted upward course."

Admitting that there have been many mercantile failures in the early months of 1930, the bulletin asserts that "there may even be a little good in this ill-wind of insolvency." It urges credit executives to plan now for the time when business gets back to normal so that they may take advantage of the elimination of weak accounts.

finds "a new thrill in motoring"

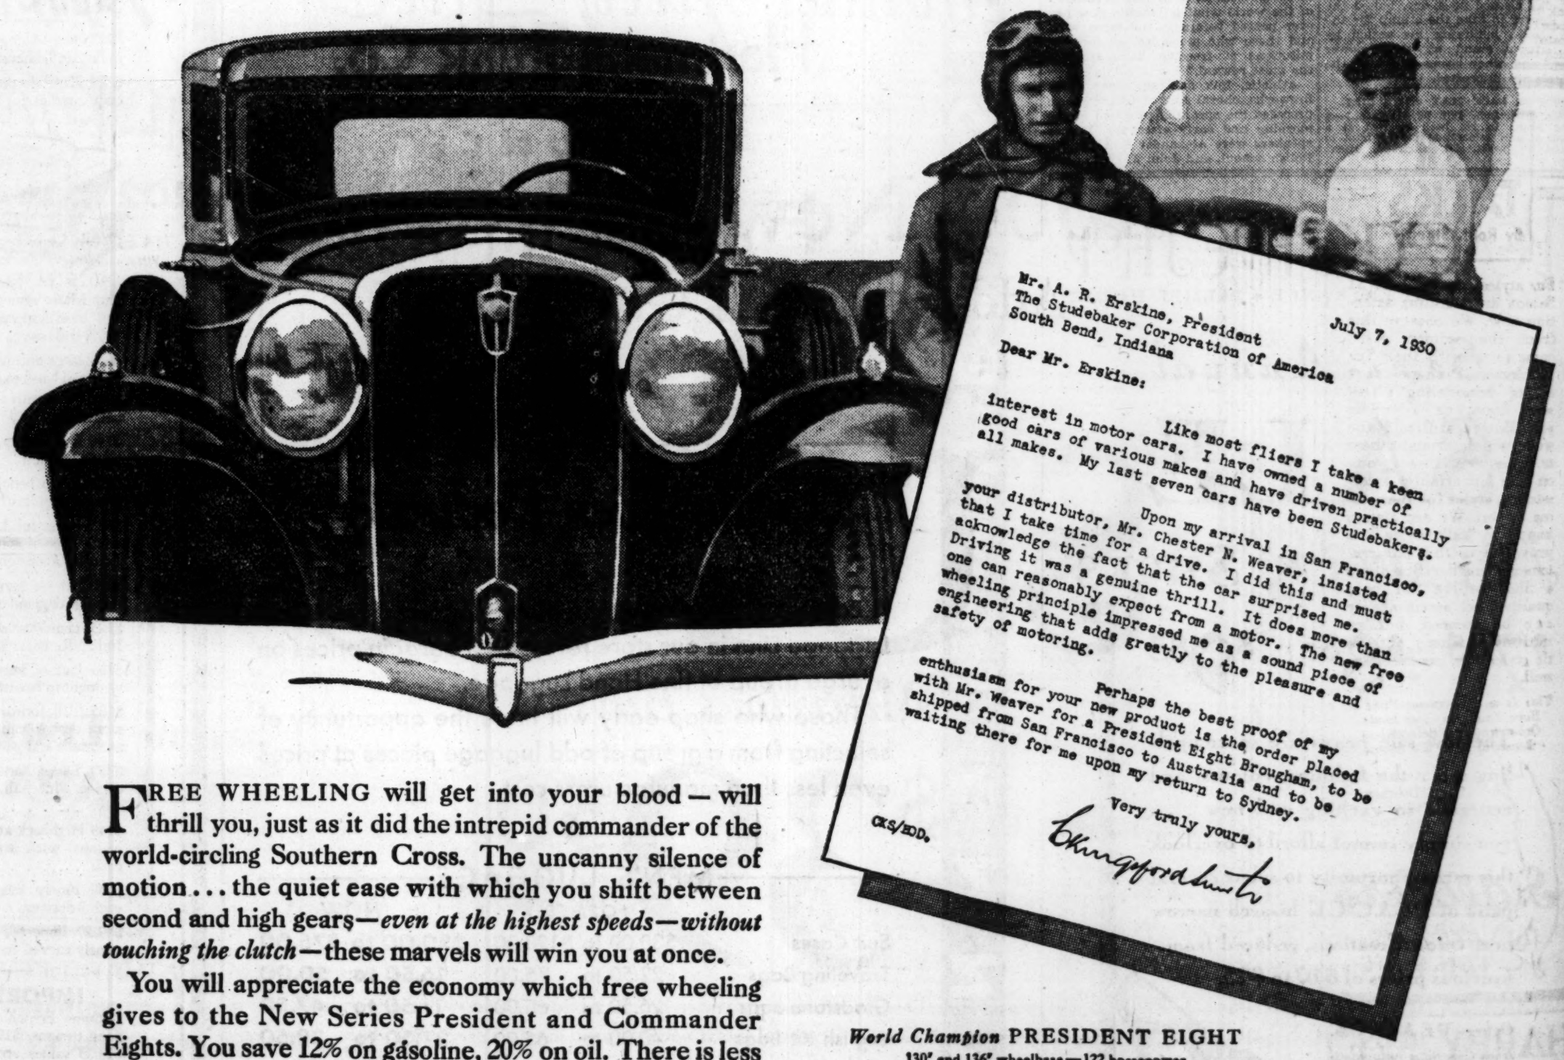
-FREE WHEELING!

(MANUFACTURED UNDER STUDEBAKER PATENTS)



FREE WHEELING will get into your blood — will thrill you, just as it did the intrepid commander of the world-circling Southern Cross. The uncanny silence of motion . . . the quiet ease with which you shift between second and high gears—even at the highest speeds—without touching the clutch—these marvels will win you at once.

You will appreciate the economy which free wheeling gives to the New Series President and Commander Eights. You save 12% on gasoline, 20% on oil. There is less carbonizing of motor, less tire wear, less chassis strain, plus new factors of safety.

But come, experience for yourself the extraordinary thrill of free wheeling—this new and exclusive Studebaker feature—in cars of breath-taking beauty!

Mr. A. R. Erskine, President
The Studebaker Corporation of America
South Bend, Indiana

July 7, 1930

Dear Mr. Erskine:

Like most fliers I take a keen interest in motor cars. I have owned a number of good cars of various makes and have driven practically all makes. My last seven cars have been Studebakers.

Upon my arrival in San Francisco, your distributor, Mr. Chester N. Weaver, insisted that I take time for a drive. I did this and must acknowledge the fact that the car surprised me. Driving it was a genuine thrill. It does more than one can reasonably expect from a motor. The new free wheeling principle impressed me as a sound piece of engineering that adds greatly to the pleasure and safety of motoring.

Perhaps the best proof of my enthusiasm for your new product is the order placed with Mr. Weaver for a President Eight Brougham, to be shipped from San Francisco to Australia and to be waiting there for me upon my return to Sydney.

Very truly yours,

CKS/EOD.

3 BANK ROBBERS FLEE OLNEY JAIL IN DARING BREAK

Guards Nearby Fail to Hear Them Go.

Robinson, Ill., July 20.—[Special.]—Three members of a gang of four who robbed the First National bank at Noble June 24, escaped from Richland county jail at Olney last night. They kidnaped two Olney youths and made them drive them to Terre Haute, Ind., where they released them but kept their car.

Eddie Meyers, Clint Williams, and Francis Dunnieu in their midnight escape passed within forty feet of two armed guards after having bound and gagged another prisoner, sawed off the inner lock of a steel built pen and broke the outer lock without attracting the guards' attention or awakening Sheriff Sam Ashmore.

Had Friend Outside.

Eletus Grinder, 23, and Edward Minke, 22, were sitting in Grinder's coupe a block from the jail shortly after midnight, when the bandits, accompanied by a man called "Pet," stepped up to the car, displayed revolvers, and ordered to youths to drive them away. Pet, who, officers believed, engineered the escape, disappeared, while the bandits forced the boys to drive them to Terre Haute.

The bandits were captured on the day of the bank robbery after a long chase, near Toledo, Ill. Carl Beese, former Kentucky police officer and the other member of the gang, was killed as the bank robbers resisted arrest. Three surrendered and were scheduled to be indicted by a special Richland county grand jury tomorrow after being held in jail under $30,000 bonds.

Recover Some of Loot.

Richland county officers recovered $2,444 in Liberty bonds a week ago when Eddie Meyers took Sheriff Ashmore to a spot near Toledo where they were hidden in a tree.

Richland county officers believe the men to be members of a southern Illinois gang of automobile thieves and think the higher ups engineered the escape to avoid possibility of being implicated in the series of robberies which the trio confessed.

GENERAL EXODUS TO FOLLOW NAVY TREATY SESSION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—A general exodus of senators and high government officials of the Hoover administration is scheduled to follow adjournment of the special treaty session of the senate this week.

President Hoover probably will be among the first of the Washington officials to leave the capital for a vacation. Immediately after his departure for a trip through the western national parks about Aug. 6, most of the members of the cabinet are expected to leave for their homes, the seashore or the mountains. Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson expects to leave on a fishing expedition within the near future.

Undersecretary of State Joseph P. Cotton is expected to complete his leave this week. Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams has spent considerable time since his return from the London naval conference in Boston sailing his yacht.

avenue. Des Forges was fishing from a rowboat on Channel lake near Antioch when a power craft driven by William Ward, a bond salesman living at Channel lake, rammed and sank the rowboat. At the inquest it was brought out that neither boat had lights.

Walter Colek, 24 years old, 127 Clark street, Hammond, Ind. Swimming in a pool at Douglas park, Hammond, Colek lost his strength and sank in ten feet of water. Hammond police recovered his body within ten minutes, but failed to revive him.

Unidentified youth, about 18 years old and wearing a bathing suit. A life guard at the 12th street beach, Louis Selinger, found his body floating 300 feet off shore. The victim was taken to St. Luke's hospital and resuscitation was attempted. The effort failed.

Another death by drowning since the heat wave began was that of Elmer Amen, 17 years old, 4449 Fulton street, who lost his life while swimming at Lake Zurich on Saturday.

Five men of various ages, who planned some aquatic sport on a 6 by 10 foot raft of their own construction off Fort Sheridan, lost their makeshift paddles and were drifting helpless three miles from shore when an unidentified Lake Forest resident observed their distress signals and notified Lake Forest police. Russell McBride and a squad raced to the rescue in two borrowed motorboats.

One of the party, James Marhoul, 34 years old, 2456 South Avers avenue, lay half conscious from heat prostration on the raft and had to be lifted into the motorboat. The others, who suffered nothing worse than a bad scare, were Fred Warner, 61 years old, 2534 South Turner avenue; George Campsky, 27 years old, 1543 South Ridgeland avenue, Berwyn; Joseph Sneller, 38 years old, 2518 South Sawyer avenue, and James Beranik, 5050 Lake Park avenue.

Firemen in Busy Day.

A hundred and seventy fire alarms in twelve hours, many of which were attributed to spontaneous combustion, gave the fire department a warmly busy day. A prairie fire at the southern end of Fox lake, in Lake county, brought out apparatus from four villages and affored 100 volunteers two hours of strenuous exercise.

Despite the superabundant solar heat, police lines were necessary to keep several thousand spectators from dangerous proximity to a 3-11 fire, which inflicted $25,000 damage in the yards of the Chicago Warehouse Lumber company, 1739 North Kildare avenue.

The Fox lake fire, sweeping across thirty acres of parched growth, destroyed two cottages and endangered 25 others before the flames were checked by the Fox Lake, Round Lake, Gray's Lake and Antioch fire departments, assisted by scores of volunteers equipped with water soaked garments for beating down the blaze. The recently installed water system failed and hose lines were fed from the lake itself.

Torrid Wave Hits East.

Accounts of heat deaths and drouth in the central, eastern and southern states and of moderate weather only in Minnesota and a corner of New England, were carried in the Associated Press report last night.

With 92 degrees of heat and the humidity high, four died of heat prostration and seven were drowned in New York. In Washington, D. C., a previous all time temperature record of 106.5 degrees was exceeded by a tenth of a point when at 5 p. m. the mercury sizzled at 105.6 degrees.

An unofficial mark of 112 gave Columbus, O., first place among sweltering American cities while Keedysville, Md., Charlottesville, Va., and Toledo, O., shared second place with 107 degrees.

Farmers Pray for Rain.

In parched Kansas farmers attending Sunday religious services prayed for rain. By order of the bishop of Omaha, prayers for rain were offered in every church of the Catholic diocese of Omaha.

Even an airplane crash was blamed on the weather. Taking off from Stinson airport near La Grange in a Waco biplane, William Ellis had gained about 50 feet of altitude when the plane dropped abruptly to the ground, crushing the landing gear and a wing spar. An aeronautical engineer at the airport explained that the heated air was too light to provide the necessary lifting force.

TWO PLANES TAKE AIR IN EFFORT TO SET NEW REFUELING RECORD

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 20.—(AP)—Two planes took off from here tonight, both seeking to break the refueling endurance record of almost 554 hours set by the Hunter brothers in Chicago.

The first, containing Louis Reichers and Robert J. Black, army reserve pilots, ascended at 7:34 p. m. [eastern standard time] and the second, piloted by Tex Andling of Rosebud, Tex., and Jack Charleson of Ottawa, hopped off 55 seconds later.

ROAD JAMS SPOIL WISCONSIN VISIT FOR CHICAGOANS

Quarter Million Drive There and Back.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., July 20.—[Special.]—Automobiles, a large portion of them bearing Chicago vehicle tags, taxed the capacity of parking spaces around the hundreds of lakes in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin this afternoon. Motor clubs estimated that there were 250,000 visitors from Chicago alone.

Leaving Chicago this morning, the TRIBUNE road car made a circle drive around Cook county, and found all pavements radiating from the city jammed to thirty and thirty-five mile an hour travel by the outpour of motorists fleeing the heat of the city for that of the country.

This afternoon a man at a tourist information desk here was overheard advising a Minnesota automobile party that all entrances to Chicago will be blocked by congestion until midnight.

Advises to Stay Away.

"If you've never been in a Chicago Sunday traffic jam, I'd advise you against going into the city this afternoon," said the tourist bureau employé. "The long delays in the crowds are nerve racking and you're lucky if you don't get a bent fender or worse."

"How's Chicago going to take care of its world's fair in '33?" asked the Minnesota driver.

"Chicagoans say they're going to widen the pavements and separate grades at highway intersections."

There may have been a few drivers who avoided Chicago's congestion but there were 300,000 automobiles stalled on the inadequate pavement entrances to Chicago this afternoon and evening, according to a report by long distance telephone from the Cook county highway police.

Wider Highway Plans.

The highways extending north from Chicago—Sheridan road, U. S.-41, Illinois 21—Rand road and Northwest highway, were crowded from Chicago past the state line well into Wisconsin. Gov. Emmerson, in his 1930 and 1931 construction program plans to widen the main roads as far as route 12, which extends west from Lake Forest, through Half Day and Lake Zurich. The Chicago Motor club, in its proposed state program for 1932 and 1933 would have Illinois widen the roads to the Wisconsin line.

There is sentiment in Wisconsin for carrying the 40 foot pavements to the resort lake region in the southern part of the state, and some favor connecting Madison with Chicago by a four lane highway 143 miles long. The lakes and woods of Wisconsin are a natural playground for the metropolitan area, argue the proponents of road improvements, but the patronage of the resorts is limited by the capacity of the highways.

WARN VACATIONISTS AGAINST SUNSTROKE AND BEACH DANGERS

At the beginning of the midsummer vacation period—the last two weeks in July and the first two in August—the Chicago safety council yesterday issued a bulletin warning recreation seekers against carelessness and over-exertion in the search for diversion.

"The next four weeks will take an appalling toll of lives among vacationers," said the bulletin, signed by President Charles L. Rice. "Sunstroke and drowning will lead the list of fatal mishaps. By exercising the simple precepts of care and restraint, hundreds of Chicagoans will avoid falling victims to these two summer dangers."

Some of the important "don'ts" listed by the council are:

Don't go in the water alone or with persons who cannot swim; don't swim beyond the safety lines at public beaches; don't swim after the regular beach hours; don't go in the water for at least an hour after eating; don't go into the water when suffering from any ailment, unless a physician recommends swimming; don't stay in the water when you feel dizzy, weak, or unnaturally cold; don't exercise strenuously until at least an hour after eating; don't change the temperature of your body radically internally or externally; don't exercise at all in abnormally hot weather; don't go into crowds.

SEE RED PLOT AS MANY PLUNGE TO DEATH ON TRAIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 20.—News reached here tonight of a disastrous wreck on the Harbin-Mukden railway. A night express train was derailed 25 miles south of Harbin on July 18. The number of deaths is reported to have been large.

The accident occurred at the bridge spanning the Taitsikou river. Thirteen of the 14 coaches were derailed and several plunged over the embankment into the marsh. Railway officials found that 160 yards of track had been torn up by unidentified persons.

The catastrophe has caused a sensation in Manchuria because for the last three weeks reports have been current that the soviets were planning to resume warlike activities and organize strikes, owing to the hitches in the Chinese-Russian peace conference, now in session at Moscow.

Circus Train Jumps Tracks in Canada; 4 Dead, 17 Hurt

MONCTON, N. B., July 20.—(AP)—Four men were killed and seventeen injured in the wreck of a circus train early today on the main line of the Canadian National Railways at Canaan, 14 miles north of here. The derailed train was a special carrying the Al G. Barnes circus from Newcastle to Charlottetown and, with one exception, all the victims were employés of the circus.

EVER HEARD OF CHIENTAO? WAR LURKS THERE

China, Japan and Russia Are Nations Involved.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, July 20.—Of all the danger spots on a continent fairly well packed with world problems, the Chientao district of Manchuria probably has more dynamite concealed within its borders than any other equal area of the Chinese republic. The Chientao district is in the southern section of Kirin province of South Manchuria, which joins on Japanese and Soviet Russian territory.

The Japanese territory is Corea, an imperial colony, while the soviet territory is the Siberian Maritime province, of which Vladivostok is the chief port. The actual area of the Chientao district is small, probably not more than two or three counties of a middle western state of the United States, but the amount of concentrated trouble packed into that little district is all out of proportion to the area.

Province Cut off by Sea.

Kirin province, which is Chinese territory, is cut off from contact with the Japan sea by a narrow strip of territory, part of which belongs to the Japanese colony of Corea and the remainder to the Soviet Maritime province. This is a sore spot with the Chinese, who claim that Kirin province once ran out to the sea and that Japan and Russia got together and arranged the boundary to suit themselves, it being to the advantage of both that China should not have a seacoast at this particular point.

However, this is a minor point, the chief cause of the present day trouble being due to the fact that in the past decade the Chientao district has filled up with Corean settlers. It is estimated that there are about 800,000 Coreans residing in Manchuria, most of whom live in this section of Chinese territory.

On May 30 and 31 of this year a band of some 500 well armed Coreans raided a half dozen towns in the Chientao district and destroyed a considerable amount of Japanese property.

Japanese Blame Reds.

Japanese reports alleged that evidence had been found linking the Corean uprisings with the communist propaganda bureau at Chita, Siberia. Reports from Chinese sources claimed that the Coreans were plain revolutionists intent upon the overthrow of the Japanese colonial administration in Seoul. Later Japanese reports claimed that the Corean force, "armed with soviet rifles and carrying hand-grenades," had been suppressed by the Japanese "consular police." The Chinese reports alleged that the Japanese had violated China's territorial sovereignty by sending troops into the district.

That the soviet Russians have had a finger in these uprisings has generally been believed by observers of Manchurian politics. When the Sino-Soviet complications in North Manchuria reached a crisis in 1929, when the soviet sent an army into the Barga district of Heilungkiang province and occupied the capital, Hailar, Corean revolutionary students staged an uprising in Seoul, the Corean capital, that had repercussions throughout the Corean peninsula. American and British missionaries residing in Corea reported that the Japanese had more than 10,000 Corean students in jail.

Reds Organize Coreans.

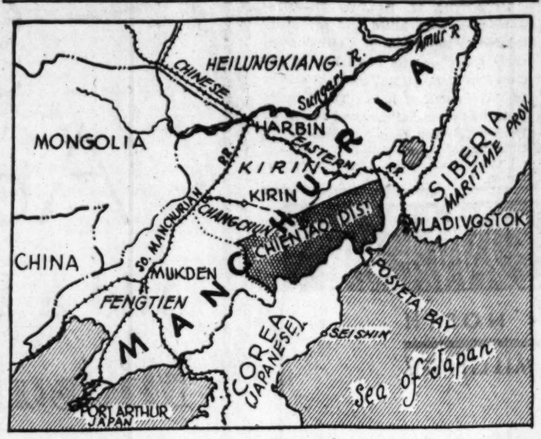
Another element in the checkered politics of this region was evidenced when it was discovered that Gen. Vassili Bluecher, commander-in-chief of the soviet far eastern Red army, had organized a division of so-called Corean communist troops. This division did effective service for the Russians in raiding Chinese border districts.

The Japanese are anxious to drive a railway through the Chientao district. Such a railway would enable the Japanese to send a military force into the hinterland of the soviet port of Vladivostok. The Russians know what this would mean, hence the soviet incentive for assisting in keeping things stirred up among the Corean revolutionists.

The economic urge also acts as a spur to the Japanese on the railway question, because the linking up of the Kirin railway with the railway running along the western side of the Corean peninsula would tend to draw the products of Kirin province toward a new port which the Japanese are developing at the town of Seishin, on the upper Corean coast southeast of Vladivostok. The completion of this railway-port project would rob the soviet port of Vladivostok of much of its importance as an outlet for the products of this section of Manchuria.

Also, it would tend to put a crimp in the newly projected Chinese port of Hulutao, on the gulf of Liaotung, several hundred miles to the east on the other side of the Corean peninsula.

SMALL PACKAGE OF DYNAMITE



Shaded portion of map shows district of Chientao, southern Manchuria, which is the "Balkans of the Far East." The district, which is Chinese territory, borders on the Russian maritime province and on the Japanese colony of Corea. Japan accuses Russia of inciting Coreans living in Chientao to revolt. China accuses Japan of violating China's sovereignty by sending troops to put down disorders. Manchurian observers see danger in the district, which is about the size of two or three Illinois counties.

FIRE DAMAGES MACHINE SHOP AT BRIDEWELL

For the second time within twenty-four hours fire broke out early yesterday close to the inmates' buildings at the Bridewell, the city prison at 28th street and California avenue. At 5 o'clock the roof of the brick machine shop was discovered on fire, the flames spreading to old rubber refuse in a storehouse nearby. The damage was estimated by Supt. James Curran at $200.

Firemen under Battalion Chief Henry Kerr worked for two hours on the smouldering rubber heaps. At no time, Curran said, were the buildings housing the prisoners in any danger. He denied a report that inmates were used in fighting the fire.

A pile of rubbish in the street back of the adjoining county jail and Criminal Courts building caught fire early Saturday evening.

These "diving" balls prove that this new motor oil will not thin out...

JUST a turn of the hand and you make for yourself one of the most interesting experiments ever made with motor oil. Ask any Standard Oil Service Station attendant to show you the "ball and bottle test".

WHAT HAPPENS in this experiment is very simple. As you turn the bottles upside down, the little metal balls "dive" through the oil to the bottom of each bottle. The heavier the oil the more slowly the ball drops. In oil that is thinned out, the ball falls very quickly.

Watch the bottle containing New Iso-Vis that has gone many hundreds of miles in the crankcase. You will see that it actually is as heavy as the fresh oil. New Iso-Vis is the only motor oil that will not thin out in the crankcase of your car.

But New Iso-Vis does more than end the danger caused by oil "thinning out". It lubricates better at extremes of temperature, and deposits far less carbon. Actual tests show that New Iso-Vis leaves a carbon deposit 50% less than the average deposit of the better grade oils tested.

New Iso-Vis is now on sale at all Standard Oil dealers and service stations.

SOME OILS are satisfactory at high temperatures, others at low temperatures. But New Iso-Vis lubricates correctly over the complete range of engine temperatures.

THE SMALL carbon deposit of New Iso-Vis, at the left, is compared here with that of a popular premium-priced motor oil. Consider the saving in time, trouble and money that New Iso-Vis will bring you.

New ISO-VIS 30¢ a quart Motor Oil

Polarine

The New Polarine also is produced by our new refining processes—giving it a degree of lubricating efficiency which we believe is exceeded only by the New Iso-Vis. The price is 25c a quart.

WHO SHALL PLAN THE SUBWAY?

The corporation counsel has given an opinion that the preparation of plans for a subway is the job of the board of local improvements rather than the city council if part of the cost of the subways is to be met by special assessment. The initiative thus far has been taken by the local transportation committee and the city council, which has retained legal and engineering advisers for the work.

What the effect of the corporation counsel's opinion may be is not yet clear, but there is no reason so far as we can see for changing the present arrangements. The council holds the purse strings, and Mr. Faherty, as head of the board of local improvements, can prepare no plans until and unless the council appropriates for him. Mr. Faherty has repeatedly expressed his eagerness to build the subway, and he need only accept in good faith the experts selected by the council to achieve his ambition.

The suggestion has been thrown out that the city administration wishes to take credit to itself for subway building rather than permit the council to reap the glory; hence, it is said, a movement is on foot to force the subway planning into the hands of the board of local improvements, which is the arm of the administration. The fact is that there is plenty of glory to go around if the subway is started, and there will be no glory for any one if the start is delayed by bickering as to the authorship of the plans. If the corporation counsel's opinion is, indeed, the law, then the council cannot act without the board, and in any case the board cannot act without the council, which must first appropriate for the work of planning and finally must approve the plans submitted. Evidently the council has both the first and the last word.

The people of Chicago who gave an overwhelming vote for subways at the recent referendum are justified in expecting prompt action. Mr. Faherty has it in his power to give them what they want by cooperating with the council wholeheartedly.

MR. McKELLAR TRIES HIS HAND.

Senator McKellar of Tennessee has turned out to be a perfect service station of naval treaty reservations and as an opponent of the agreement is suspected of turning from despair to frivolity. One of his latest would restrict the British to the use of 30 merchant ships for conversion into six inch gun cruisers in case of war and the United States to a like number. If this treaty had gone out with all of Mr. McKellar's admirable suggestions attached, it would have contained a short history of the relations of the United States and Great Britain, a plat of some new real estate deals between the two countries, a restatement of the functions of the President and the senate as drawn from the laws of partnership and such a meticulous equalizing of the naval power of the two countries that the midshipmen of the two navies would have the same number of buttons and the admirals an equal weight of braid.

In this fashion it would have been a more admirable document and a truly great aid to the maintenance of peace. Mr McKellar has made himself a logical candidate for the next naval conference. His frivolity would be more trustworthy than the seriousness of a half dozen others who could be named.

THE ALASKAN INQUIRY.

A committee of senators has been appointed to investigate the government's railroad in Alaska. The railroad was authorized in the Wilson administration and since then has cost the American taxpayers close to $80,000,000. It has lost close to a million dollars a year since its completion, and that figure, it is said, takes no account of the depreciation in roadbed and equipment. Meanwhile the white population of Alaska has been decreasing. There are less than 30,000 whites in the entire territory and less than 8,000 in the region served by the railroad.

We think it is well that the senators make the trip to Alaska, even though it be at the taxpayers' expense. The tradition has grown up in this country that the purchase of Alaska was one of the historic bargains, comparable to the purchase of Manhattan for a string of beads and of Louisiana for $27,000,000. Today the territory bought as Louisiana supports a population of 20 million and its wealth is estimated at 60 billion dollars. Manhattan real estate is probably the most valuable in the world and its population is sixty times that of Alaska. Alaska, on the contrary, has cost the United States treasury some 200 million dollars since the purchase.

A visit to the territory may make dry statistics live in the minds of the senators. It may lead them to see that the only means of reducing the cost of the territory to the American taxpayers is to dispose of the government railroad for the best price obtainable. Once the railroad is in private hands, the drain on the treasury will cease and the railroad's usefulness in developing the territory will be augmented.

No one doubts that there is in Alaska a great reserve of timber, minerals, and water power. Many of the resources may not be needed for generations to come, but certainly they will not be used to enrich mankind until the control of the bureaucracy is removed. The sale of the railroad will be the first step toward the realization of the possibilities of the territory.

MANY PARKS NEEDED.

Milwaukee is looking forward to the ultimate completion of a great system of parks connected by boulevard drives and practically surrounding the metropolitan area. The project will be one to arouse the pride of all citizens.

Public authorities should, however, bear in mind that the primary purpose of municipal parks is to provide recreation areas for the people who cannot travel to the suburbs frequently, and who have neither the leisure nor the means for going far afield in search of healthful pleasure. Chicago has an extensive system of small parks and playgrounds and was, we believe, the first great city to take the latter seriously. Yet we would be the better for more small parks. Motorists enjoy boulevards and rural parks, but motorists can seek cool forest glades and rippling streams in distant spots. It is the workman without a car, the weary mother seeking rest where trees and flowers and bushes grow, and the children who have no roomy dooryard of their own who need the public parks and playgrounds to bring them happiness they otherwise would miss.

"A small park in each square mile" is a pretty good way to describe the requirements of a modern city.

Not many families without automobiles will make much use of a park located more than a half mile away from home. Large cities need a few large parks, with zoos and other special features, but most of all they need a plentiful number of smaller ones.

AMERICAN POLICY AND FOREIGN INFLUENCE.

The indefinite multiplication of congressional investigations is certainly not conducive either to the efficient performance of the essential duties of congress or to the public weal. We have already had too many congressional investigations which produce nothing but publicity for politicians. But there is something to be said, nevertheless, for the proposal by the Ancient Order of Hibernians for an inquiry into the sources and methods of the various organizations which while purporting to foster international friendship direct their influence always against the resolute protection of American interests and the strengthening of national defense.

The proposal comes, not very happily, from an organization itself influenced by considerations which have nothing to do with American history, from bitter memories of wrongs done by one foreign nation to another. But that fact does not deprive the proposal of its merit.

The organizations which it is proposed to inquire into are the Carnegie Foundation, an institution endowed by the late Andrew Carnegie, a very loyal Scot, who always opposed American preparedness; the English Speaking union, composed of ardent Anglophiles, whose Americanism is of the variety cherished by the loyalists of the revolutionary conflict and whose admiration for England inclines them to support the English view of every controversy we engage in; the Pilgrims society, made up of the same sort, and the Sulgrave institution, which, under the guise of perpetuating the memory of Washington, devotes itself to the commemoration of Washington's ancestry in England with ironic disregard of Washington's own virile advocacy of complete American independence.

The motion emphasizes the experience we have had since 1914 of the skill and effectiveness of propaganda intended to shape our policy on behalf of British interests, a phenomenon not reassuring to Americans who are single minded in their devotion to their own country. And while this influence is in principle no less justifiable nor acceptable from the proper standpoint of American independence, it is more serious than any other form of hyphenation in being supported by stronger ties of race, language, culture, and social prestige than support any other alien appeal in the United States. Working within the special field of our relations with Great Britain, this influence adds to the obstructive force of the broader pacifist and internationalistic propaganda which resists measures of national defense and favors any departure from the American policy of independence from all foreign entanglements. It is deserving of thorough examination. There has been no period of our history when it has been more important than now to clear the air and to see precisely what our situation is.

Editorial of the Day

GLOOM IN NEW YORK.

[New York Evening Post.]

With deep regret we note that official returns from the final assembly district show that the city of New York has increased its population by 1,335,315, or 23.8 per cent, since the 1920 census. There are many other mournful details. For the first time we have four boroughs in the million class; it is our largest decennial increase; we may surpass London's population in the next census.

Bad news, my masters; bad, depressing news.

Think what it means. Over a million more people to drive motors into our traffic jams, to crowd into our crowded subways, to turn radios into our radio din, to build horrible houses on our lovely suburban meadows. Over a million more people to stamp out more of the city's charm and comfort.

Thirty years ago Manhattan was a likable and livable place. Even ten years ago the incoming people had not forced us to make room for them by destroying the great mansions on 5th avenue. Nor had they compelled us to cover Queens with miles of identical houses even now labeled our future slums. Nor had they led us to concentrate populations into topless towers at city centers.

No, we could get along beautifully without extra population. Our ideal should be that little city of Mill Hope, or something like that, which in the census returns gained .00914 of a person in the last decade. Consider how pleasant must life be there. No overcrowding. No changing neighborhoods. No tearing down of old landmarks; but peace and quiet.

New York doesn't need a "Watch Us Grow" movement. On the contrary, it ought to launch a big "Stop Our Growth" campaign.

How to Keep Well By Dr W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

A VERY TRYING DISEASE.

Undulant fever is a very trying disease. In America it rarely causes death, but is responsible for uncomfortable and disabling fever which lasts more than two months if there are no complications and for four to six months if complications arise. Not many are financially able to withstand an attack of disabling illness of such duration.

The disease appears to have originated around the Mediterranean sea and to have been spread only by goat's milk. It has gone a long way from its place of origin and it has transferred its animal relationships from goats to cows and hogs. So far as the evidence is conclusive, in nearly every section of America the only important agent for the spread of undulant fever to man is cow's milk, and the one sure way of prevention is pasteurization.

Waycross, Ga., wrestled with its undulant fever problem for more than two years. They began with a raw milk supply. Then one-half of their milk was pasteurized. By October, 1929, 90 per cent was so treated. By March, 1930, the sale of raw milk in Waycross was prohibited by law. Undulant fever has disappeared and they hope never to have another case, at least among the law abiding who stay at home.

When the disease began to frighten the people, examinations of all the milch cows for the bacillus of undulant fever was made. Something more than 5 and less than 10 per cent of them were found infected. The cases of undulant fever were all found to be users of raw milk from infected dairies. Even when nine-tenths of the milk was pasteurized it was found that all the fever cases used raw milk either at home or at noon lunch away from home.

There was no evidence that any one was infected by ice cream. Much milk from infected cows was going into ice cream, but it was first pasteurized. Both butter and cheese got clean bills of health from the investigators of the epidemic. The butter was all made from sour cream, and souring seems to destroy the undulant fever bacillus. Both eggs and meat were acquitted of spreading the disease.

The bacillus which causes most of the trouble is one that affects hogs, yet eaters of cooked hog meat are not in danger, nor are the cooks who prepare the meat for the table.

SKIN IS POISONED.

Miss M. T. writes: Last summer my hands broke out with little water blisters that itched very much. Now this summer I am troubled with the same thing. Could you please tell me what it is and how to get rid of it?

REPLY.

The skin is being poisoned somehow. How about poison ivy or some other poison plant? Or is it some dye or soap or other chemical?

Find the cause and remove it.

REMEDY FOR CRAMPS.

R. C. writes: Could you explain the cause of cramps in the leg? Also, is there any remedy for it? I often get them while in swimming and it is very inconvenient. I also get them in bed at night.

REPLY.

You can avoid having cramps at night by sleeping under warmer bed covers.

Avoiding cramps while swimming is a more difficult matter. Violent exertion, such as long jumps and high speed, sometimes brings on a cramp. If one gets a cramp while swimming let him drag the cramped limb; quit using it. Above all, he should keep his head. Fear is a greater danger than cramping. It is easy for a calm man to keep afloat, and cramp passes off in a little while.

BEET GREENS WHOLESOME.

Mrs. H. B. writes: I have Swiss chard and beets growing in my garden. Do these greens have the same food value as spinach?

REPLY.

Both beet greens and chard are wholesome, as well as palatable. Most greens, except rhubarb greens, are wholesome. However, many people do not know how to cook them to make them palatable.

13 INCHES IN DISPUTE.

Chicago, July 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I purchased a 25 foot frontage of real estate in residential territory on contract, paying a stipulated sum down, the balance on monthly payments. I built an 18x18 foot garage on the rear and had the rear of my lot surveyed. The surveyor discovered that my neighbor was 13 inches on my property. 1. What legal steps can be taken to reclaim my 13 inches? 2. Who must pay the damages or costs if it goes to court? 3. The fence in question was there before either of the neighbors bought their property. A. R.

1. If you mean that his building is on your land you should offer to sell him the strip in question. If it is merely a fence, you should try to get him to agree as to the proper location. If necessary, share with him the cost of a new survey, which both of you will agree to accept.
2. Each party pays his own attorney. The loser pays the court costs.
3. The limitation period is 20 years.

MAY LOSE FARM.

Chicago, July 12.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a 115 acre farm in Illinois. My mortgage is due in October. I cannot pay it, so I should like to take out a new mortgage; but the bank says the mortgage is too big and I can get no money from them. Do you think I will lose the farm? M. M.

Yes, unless you can borrow the money elsewhere or sell your equity.

FIRST PAPERS OVERDUE.

Chicago, July 16.—[Friend of the People.]—A person entered the United States in June, 1924, on a six months' visa, paid $10 head tax, and applied August, 1924, for first papers, but heard nothing further. May he reapply for first papers? M. C.

If an applicant made an application for a declaration of intention in August, 1924, and has heard nothing of it, the papers have no doubt become lost and if the person referred to desires to make a declaration of intention he should call at this office and receive a form A-2213 and after it shall have been received he should comply therewith.

LONDON STREETS.

The best little shops are in Porchester place;
The hats are so large, the flowers so bright.
The woolens and silks, the jackets of lace:
(Why don't haberdashers keep open at night?)

But all blinds are not down—
And the shops full of sweets
Are all over town
In the smallest of streets.

There are bellows in Bell street
And tankards that clink,
Pewter plates like oiled silver
For my meat and drink,
Old shawls and fine furs, of ermine and mink—
(And the British museum's in Bloomsbury!)

. . . . . .

Boccaccio and Rabelais;
Old books in sturdy binding—
Along Queen's road I dare not stay,
So many snares I'm finding.

Old knockers, candlesticks of brass
And ivory boxes mellow,
To keep my true love's token in—
And —— Oh, the charming fellow!—

His chimney-pot of narrow brim,
Black tie and linen neat,
Old Turveydrop steps mincingly
Adown the quiet street.

There's fish and chips in this shop,
Fresh eggs and greens in that;
Small rosy flowers in purple pots
Along a dingy flat;
(And, oh, against the monument
You may not beat a mat!)

White children making daisy chains,
Trim women cloaked in brown;
And on the lawns at Buckingham
They're mowing daisies down.

I sit and watch in court and glade
Slim girls so brisk at tennis;
I think of Gill, the chambermaid,
Who wants to go to Venice.

They play at play, they dream their tasks,
This pageant marching past me;
Hands that give to hearts that ask—
Whose joy will always last me.

Along Moscow road there's an old violin
And the man plays too well for my dreaming, I find,
A stoic, I'll flee the accordions' din,
But "Love's Old Sweet Song" leaves a memory behind.

I come on a church at the end of a street—
Peace to its cloister, blessed every stone.
The names of the dead are under my feet,
Without is the sunlight—I'm still not alone.

For England is here; the men of fierce love
With the tingle of caravan joy in their veins:
The exquisite lounger, the girl like a dove,
The yokel that lives all his life out in lanes.

I want the Dutch garden down Kensington way,
The moor hens and pond; the azaleas at Kew;
I want to crowd into one great splendid day,
The sights that the centuries find all too few.

When I've seen every church o'er whose legends I've pored,
Every dear poet's house whose verse I've adored;
Made friends with each dog, patted every black cat;
When, lured by sweet voices, I've scanned every hat—
Then—I'll see the museum at Bloomsbury!

RICHARD O. SCRAGG.

A NEW YORK ATTORNEY, according to the newspapers, is sadly puzzled. He is the custodian of 1,300 cases of genuine imported Scotch sent to the U. S. A. away back in 1921. By the provisions of a will the attorney has to settle the estate, which means to sell the Scotch and give the money to the heirs. But according to the reading of a peculiar document known as the eighteenth amendment he cannot sell the Scotch; that's why he's puzzled. What an interesting puzzle! So much better than crosswords or Ask Me Another. And while the poor attorney is worrying over this puzzle, there are so many thousands, aye, millions, of us who would give him the answer in a half minute. Wait! Do not all speak at once.

No! We Cannot, Will Not Tell!

People are writing in asking where the old cinder path is. That's the place where those who have just bought a car, new or used, go to learn how to work the doodads that make the darned thing go. But mercy, we thought everybody knew; how can you keep twenty acres in the heart of Chicago a secret? But, anyhow, we talked to some of the Old Cinder Path Club who were rolling around down there last night, and they thought it would be best not to say any more about it. Max the Bootlegger, who is ambitious to graduate as a Rum Runner, said that if everybody knew about the old cinder path it would make the place dreadfully common, and Hip Wun Lung, who is down there with a flivver he bought for twenty-five bucks, said, "Kleep seclet; no wantchee all mans down this side." So pardon us, dear friends, but as the three or four thousand members of the Cinder Path Club wish the location to remain a deep, dark secret, we can do no more than respect their wishes.

LAGNIAPPE.

"I NEVER REALIZED," writes Jaundiced Janith, "that a column conductor has a hard life, but when you went past me yesterday morning leading your little dog I saw the cruel telltale lines in your sad face." Lissen, Janith, if you had to lead around a contrary Sealyham pup that has his own ideas of where he wants to go and that wants to take a large hunk out of every wire-haired terrier that insults him, you'd have cruel telltale lines in your sad face, too.

PROSPERITY, says some more or less important man in New York, will come back a-running if everybody would buy a shirt. This won't seem to many as putting any great amount of money in circulation, but hesitate—remember there were any number of people who lost money in the recent debacles on the stock exchange and so many, many of them lost their shirts. FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 21, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. James A. Hardie issued an official statement on the charges that Secretary of War Stanton refused to issue a pass to allow Mrs. Surratt, hanged for conspiracy to assassinate President Lincoln, the benefit of a spiritual adviser, and the statement shows that the charge is false throughout. Gen. Hardie says that he cautioned Father Walters against haranguing against the administration and what he termed "military tyranny" and counseled moderation, but there was no refusal of a pass.

NEW YORK.—The Herald's Huntsville, Ala., correspondent says that planters have leagued together and refuse to sell land to Yankees at any price. They are afraid of the political influence of northern men and will do everything in their power to keep them away. They would rather convert the south into a wilderness than to allow Yankees among them. Negro schools are in a flourishing condition.

WASHINGTON.—It may interest those who are anxiously waiting to see retribution overtake the authors of some of the diabolical crimes which were committed in the interest of the slaveholders' rebellion to know that Maj. Coburn of the bureau of military justice has just returned from a tour of the south, having visited the Andersonville, Macon, Savannah, Danville, Florence, and Augusta graveyards of our murdered prisoners, for the purpose of procuring evidence to bring the guilty rebel officials to justice. Capt. Henry Wirz, former commandant of the Andersonville prison pen, has been arrested and is now confined in the Old Capitol prison.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 21, 1900.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Secretary Hay received the following welcome dispatch in cipher from Minister Conger at Peking: "In British legation, under continuous shot and shell from Chinese troops. Quick relief alone can prevent general massacre." The date of the dispatch is not given, but it is believed to be July 18. Its authenticity is beyond question, as it is in state department code and it shows that the envoys were safe fully a week or ten days after the alleged massacre told of in dispatches from Shanghai.

LONDON.—The London press and public, having made up their minds a week ago that all members of the Peking legation have been murdered, and having prepared an elaborate memorial service in honor of the dead at St. Paul's on July 23, are inclined to be skeptical over the Conger message received at Washington. They regard it as another clever Chinese trick.

CHICAGO.—Mayor Harrison has no watch. This came out when the schedule of his personal property, filed with the board of assessors, was made public. People who have gazed on a wealth of chain across his vest front now wonder what on earth the mayor is wearing at the ends of that chain.

CHICAGO.—Miss Bessie Anthony won the honors that belong to the woman's golf championship of the west by her victory over Mrs. J. M. Cutter in the finals for the Governor's cup at Onwentsia, 5 up and 4 to play.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 21, 1920.

NEW YORK.—Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, Shamrock IV., won the second race in the international series in a hard fought match off Sandy Hook. Despite its handicap of 7 minutes 1 second the challenger led the Resolute by 2 minutes 26 seconds corrected time.

CHICAGO.—After conferences lasting all day and far into the night the 2,000 representatives of the sixteen railway crafts, gathered in Chicago to consider the rail wage award handed down by the United States railway labor board, failed to reach an actual decision as to its rejection or acceptance. However, there was a decidedly hopeful tone to the situation. Added weight was given the wage increase by the fact that approximately $140,000,000 is to be distributed as back pay under the retroactive clause of the award.

NEW YORK'S APPORTIONMENT.

Chicago, July 16.—Several weeks ago two letters appeared in THE TRIBUNE relative to the representation of Chicago in the state legislature. Both of them said that Chicago ought to be content with a minor position in the state and based their contention on the fact that New York is also restricted.

There is one very important fact which they miss entirely and which is obvious to any one familiar with New York state. There are no cities in Illinois to correspond to a group of large cities in New York state. Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Albany, Yonkers, and others are all larger than any city in Illinois other than Chicago. The voter in Buffalo or any other city is more in sympathy with the voter in New York than with the voter in the town of Dayton's Corners. Legislation on income tax which is designed to lie heavily upon the New Yorker lies as heavily upon the voter of Rochester. Taxes designed to mulct the New Yorker are equally unfair to any other urban resident.

There is no corresponding situation in Illinois. M. BERNARD SANOW.

LAWYERS AND CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

Chicago, July 18.—Let me write a footnote to your recent editorial stating that "the lawyer is supposed to be specially informed as to the history and meaning of our constitutional system," and therefore prepared to lead public opinion, but that "in latter years legal education has been defective in this field."

A recent publication of the summer course in the law schools of the country shows that in comparatively few instances is the constitution of the Unites States mentioned. That is in keeping with the report of the committee on American citizenship of the American Bar association in 1924:

"Your committee has examined the law courses of twenty-four of the leading schools of this country. To our amazement we have found that a study of the constitution is compulsory in only eight of them, and in two of those attention is given to the purely commercial or legal value of it, the study being confined to interstate commerce, the contract clause, the fourteenth amendment, and the like. Of the other sixteen, one makes no mention of it at all, and in the other fifteen the course is elective. So that practically one-third of the leading law schools of the country insist upon a study of the constitution. Not only that, but we find that boards of examiners passing upon the admission of students to the bar very largely ignore the constitution. In many examinations there is no mention made of it. In some cases only three or four questions are asked."

That report was signed by Elihu Root and other men of standing. It recommended that law examinations be made so rigid that law schools would be obliged to make the constitution "a compulsory part of their course."

Hence the two maternity acts of congress, the two child labor acts, and other acts invading state prerogative, with the preposterous acts for Boulder dam and farm relief, on the constitutionality or invalidity of all of which the lawyer seemed to be without opinion. The American Bar association has resisted measures in congress against the constitutional judiciary, and some other bills, and it slew that creature of anarchy known as the recall of judicial decisions. But to the sale by the state of its local sovereignty for congressional appropriations, to legislation clearly outside the field of congress, and to the rapid building up through centralizing measures of a Potsdam-on-the-Potomac, the lawyer has been so indifferent or unaware as to warrant your comment. THOMAS JAMES NORTON.

THE FOLLY OF PROTECTION.

Chicago, July 7.—When maritime nations go to war their first effort on the sea is to blockade each other's ports with a view to working the maximum injury to their commerce by denying them access to other nations and preventing them from getting outside supplies. That is to say, preventing the importation of wealth from other countries. The motive is war, the purpose injury, the effect disaster. That is the way it works. Nearly all of the so-called leading nations of the world, the great powers, are protectionists in their economic policies.

As soon as war is over and peace declared the blockades cease. Then the legislatures of the respective countries get busy and proceed to blockade commerce by an entirely different means, for entirely different reasons, and having exactly the same effect—preventing the importation of wealth from other countries in such protected countries.

If it were necessary for protectionists to be intelligent, well informed, or logical there would not be one on the earth. The protective tariff doctrine as a means of protecting labor, which doesn't need protecting but does need justice, as a means of promoting commerce and industry, is the most absurd aggregation of disconnected, illogical, ill-fitting and disastrous notions ever collected in the history of legislation of civilized people.

So now we have the spectacle of a protectionist world more afraid of useful producers than it is of useless destroyers, and it is afraid of both. Imagine such a world discussing peace—a lasting peace—in any fashion that would result in what they claim they desire. Protectionism is a mixture of ignorance, selfishness, and hypocrisy, and as a doctrine of selfishness, inconsistency, and unfriendliness it is supported and defended by bleary eyed politicians and economic half wits, and the edifice that they have constructed all over the world is today falling about their heedless ears.

HENRY H. HARDINGE.

TAX BRIBE INDICTMENTS.

Chicago, July 8.—I notice an article in today's issue relative to one Gene Oliver being indicted by the grand jury in relation to the taking of bribe money in connection with the Wieboldt stores taxes. How come being so partial? Why not include the giver of this check also? If the taker is guilty so is the giver, as they are both engaged in the same purpose. Let this grand jury do its work properly and it will go a long way toward stopping this rotten practice. I hope to see this article in your paper. L. B. RICHARDS.

5 CONGRESSMEN TO STUDY REDS' TABLE MANNERS

Hear They Say "Damn It, Pass the Bread."

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—The manners, morals, and social life of the bolshevik in his summer retreat will come under the observation of five congressmen tomorrow. The congressional committee investigating communist activities, of which Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. is chairman, will transfer its energies from the hearing room to the dells of Dutchess county, where the Reds are weathering the hot spell preparatory to "overthrowing the government."

The jaunt will be made by train and automobile to Windale and to a spot near Beacon, both in Dutchess county, where the congressmen will view the bolsheviks in the true Pickwickian manner. The investigators have not been invited to visit the two camps—the Windale settlement harboring 350 communists and the Beacon camp almost a thousand—but, being of an adventurous bent and on a peaceful mission, they are even hopeful of being invited to lunch.

Zeal Equal to Pickwick.

The fish committee, with a zeal equal to that of Mr. Pickwick and his fellow club members, are eager to glimpse the communists in a setting that might be termed more Arcadian than revolutionary. They particularly are interested in the table manners of Reds and in their moments of relaxation, for Charles C. Wood, commissioner of conciliation of the department of labor, in describing the camps as "dens of revolutionary iniquity," told the congressmen that the boys and girls are taught both bolshevik doctrines and bad manners.

The bad manners, it was explained, were to harden them for the revolutionary battles to come. The word "please," it was pointed out, is barred as belonging to those serving the capitalistic class, and politeness in general is regarded as bourgeois prejudice.

"A communist youth," Mr. Wood told the congressmen, "must never say please pass the bread." The Leninist method of obtaining such foodstuff when beyond reach, Mr. Wood said, is to shout, "Damn it, pass the bread."

Arrival Time Kept Secret.

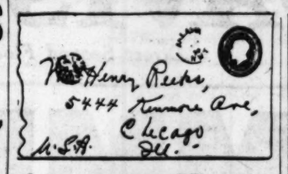
The congressional party which will pay a "friendly" surprise visit to the bolshevik camps will consist of Mr. Fish and Representatives John E. Nelson of Maine, Carl G. Bachman of West Virginia, Robert N. Hall of Mississippi, and Edward E. Eslick of Tennessee.

The time of departure and time of arrival at the first camp is being kept a secret, as they plan to make their appearance at the communist communities unheralded. It has been hinted in other quarters that the communist co-educational, cooperative and comfort camps will not take a friendly attitude toward the Pickwickian explorers and that Mr. Fish and his colleagues may not get invited to lunch and thus lose an opportunity to observe the manners of the bolshevik.

The committee will continue its investigations in Detroit next Friday and Saturday and descend upon Chicago's communist colony July 28 and 29.

INTERESTING LETTERS

If you have received a letter from an interesting or little known place send the envelope to The Tribune, stating name of place where it was mailed and some information about the writer of the letter.



Letter received by William Henry Reeks, 5444 Kenmore avenue, Chicago, Ill.

"A letter written April 6, 1930, at Shingle Point, Arctic ocean, Canada, and postmarked June 4 at Aklavik, Northwest Territories, was received by me in Chicago on June 12," Mr. Reeks writes.

"The author of the letter, Rev. H. Sherman Shepherd, is the first principal of the first Indian mission school of Canada, known as the Anglican mission, located beyond the arctic circle.

"Six mail deliveries a year are made by airplane to a point one hundred miles distant from Shingle Point—and one hundred miles in that country by dog sled, etc., especially in the winter time, the period of blizzards and continual darkness—is a long way!

"Candy is regarded as a rare luxury, as are toys and other 'sources of exquisite pleasures' so common to the little boys and girls of civilized lands. The rate of parcel post is $1.50 per pound.

"Mr. Shepherd informs me that he has a Pilot Super-Wasp short wave receiver en route and has contemplated installing a low powered C. W. transmitter. Seventeen thousand radio amateurs in the United States alone would envy him of this rare opportunity of short wave experimenting."

State Postal Clerks to Convene at Champaign

Champaign, Ill., July 20.—[Special.]—More than 100 postal clerks from practically all sections of the state will be here tomorrow for the eleventh annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Postoffice clerks. Among subjects to be discussed will be proposed legislation to cut postal working hours from 48 to 44 a week. Thomas E. Flaherty, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Postal Clerks will be the principal speaker at a banquet Monday night.

Socialists in New York Name Their State Ticket

Schenectady, N. Y., July 20.—[Special.]—Louis Waldman of Brooklyn was chosen to head the state Socialist ticket this fall by unanimous vote of the state convention of the party, which concluded its sessions here today. Mr. Waldman will run for governor on a platform stressing unemployment relief, the six-hour day and five day week, and recapture of water power resources owned by private companies.

DRYS SCHEME TO RULE CAUCUS OF NEW YORK G. O. P.

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—With "handpicking" delegates for the Republican state convention in Albany on Sept. 23, in progress all over the state, Westchester county has announced a virtually solidly dry delegation from each of its five assembly districts, in at least four of which wet sentiment is predominant.

This is viewed by wet Republicans as indicating that nothing will be left undone to subordinate prohibition as an issue in the coming state campaign, to prepare the way for as innocuous a prohibition plank as can be designed by the strategists of the party and the nomination of a candidate for governor who will not prove offensive to the drys in and out of the Republican fold.

It is viewed also in wet circles as lending color to the report which has gone out throughout the state that it would be most pleasing to President Hoover if nothing was said in the Republican state platform to conflict with the stand taken by the President on the prohibition issue or to alienate dry votes in New York state.

DETROIT VOTES ON RECALL OF MAYOR TUESDAY

468,000 Are Eligible to Cast Ballots.

Detroit, Mich., July 20.—[Special.]—One more day of platform, street corner, radio and newspaper campaigning and Detroit's voters will decide whether Mayor Charles Bowles, elected last November, shall be recalled. Estimates have been made that as many as 250,000 of the city's 468,000 registered voters will go to the polls Tuesday.

Campaigning for two weeks has been the bitterest in the city's history. Both camps have laid down a barrage of full page newspaper advertisements, virtually monopolized radio broadcasting time, rattled political skeletons and made charges and counter charges by the score.

The issue will be a straight "yes" and "no" proposition as to whether the mayor shall be recalled. In addition to propounding the question the ballot will carry some 200 words of the charges against the mayor and an equal amount in defense, which the mayor himself prepared.

Many Charges Made.

Among the charges against Mayor Bowles are:

That he has tolerated lawlessness among law enforcement agencies; delegated control of the street railway claims department to an interested attorney; there has been grafting in public works programs; paving costs have been increased twenty cents per yard; monopoly of the city's garbage business has been granted; faithful city employés have been dismissed; public records ordered kept secret; efforts made to build political machine among city employés; interference with police law enforcement, particularly by taking control of the vice squad; none of fifteen campaign pledges has been fulfilled.

Mayor Bowles denies the charges and, in his 200 word defense to appear on the ballot, declares that the real issue is whether the "people" or two of the city's newspapers—the News and the Free Press—shall govern the city.

Need Majority for Recall.

If a majority of the votes cast are for recalling Bowles a special election to name his successor will be called within thirty days. He would continue as mayor in the meantime and his name as a candidate to succeed himself automatically would go on the ballot. Other candidates could be nominated by filing petitions signed by voters.

UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM GROWS FOR EUROPEANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—European countries, like the United States, are disturbed by unemployment problems. R. M. Stephenson, chief of the European section of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, in a review of the situation in different countries makes it evident that the business depression is world wide.

Indexed figures showing the trend of unemployment for 20 European countries assembled by Mr. Stephenson show the present number of unemployed to be considerably in excess of a 100 normal representing a five year average for the same date from 1925 to 1929. The index figures show unemployment in April in the leading countries to be as follows:

United Kingdom, 150; Germany, 228; Austria, 110; Belgium, 163; Czecho-Slovakia, 150; Denmark, 81; Hungary, 94; Netherlands, 155; Norway, 141; Poland, 138; Sweden, 132; Switzerland, 95, and Irish Free State, 80. The index figure for France was only 9, the statistics for unemployment in that country representing those receiving a government benefit.

COLLAPSES AT WORK, DIES.

William Marquia, 28 years old, 4040 North Ashland avenue, died in the People's hospital yesterday after collapsing an hour earlier while at work in the Commonwealth Edison company plant at 25d and Fisk streets. Physicians said he died of an apoplectic stroke.

PARLEY ON INDIA WILL BE HELD IN HISTORIC PALACE

King Offers St. James's; Pick Delegates.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 20.—King George has placed St. James's palace at the disposal of the government for the India round table conference, scheduled to open Oct. 20. The London naval conference was also held in this palace.

The Labor government has decided to depart from the original idea of a purely government representation at the parley and has yielded to the demands of opposition leaders and will include representatives from all three political parties, but in different proportions. The ratio may be three delegates from the Labor party and two each for the Conservative and Liberal parties.

MacDonald and Benn Sure.

There is some speculation as to the personnel of the delegation, but it is practically certain that Prime Minister MacDonald and Wedgwood Benn, secretary of state for India, will head the government's delegates. It is anticipated that Viscount Peel, twice secretary of state for India, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, former minister in the last Conservative government, and who has also held the office of secretary of state for India, will represent the Conservatives. The Liberal party is expected to nominate the marquess of Reading, former viceroy of India, and Sir Herbert Samuel.

These delegates constitute purely the political side of the British body, and other interests connected with the defense and financial aspects of India are expected to be represented. It is generally anticipated that Sir John Simon, chairman of the India commission, will not be included.

It is also strongly anticipated that Pundit Motilal Nehru, imprisoned coleader in India's civil disobedience campaign, will be included in India's parley delegation. As yet the name of Mahatma Gandhi has not been mentioned here as a possible delegate.

The character of the British representation will not be known until tomorrow, when the secretary of state for India will make an official statement in the house of commons. Speculation is also rife concerning the successor of Lord Irwin, whose term of office as viceroy of India expires next spring. The marquess of Zetland and Sir Herbert Samuel have been prominently mentioned.

Ready for Gandhi Parley.

ARTIST FIGHTS FOR 3D TIME TO KEEP HIS WIFE

James B. Johnson, a commercial artist, who has been trying for five years to win back the love of his wife, Ruth, left yesterday for Elko, Nev., where, it is reported, she is preparing to file her third suit for divorce. Mr. Johnson said he would oppose it as he has the others.

Mrs. Johnson first began suing in 1926, but Judge Joseph Sabath effected a temporary truce, obtaining her consent to let her husband woo her as he had in their sweetheart days. Her last effort was in February of 1929. She charged cruelty. Judge Sabath declined to grant the decree after evidence had been produced that Johnson was so devoted a husband he washed the day's dishes always after returning from his work in the studio.

Johnson said he was unaware that his wife had gone to Elko last May to establish the necessary three months residence, until he received legal notice of the filing of her suit. He left immediately. He was accompanied by his attorney, Otto Baer.

Clear your mind of bill worries

. . . as this man did

PERHAPS you've been in a situation like this yourself. This man needed money badly to pay some bills that piled up during a sudden illness. Creditors worried him at home and at work. Their constant demands for money made his life miserable. Then his wife heard of Household and about our Plan which enables husbands and wives in such circumstances to get $100 to $300.

If you knew this man, or any of the 260,000 of our present customers, he would tell you how really simple it is to get the money you need from Household. He would tell you that the loan is arranged for in a private office with only the Household Manager, husband and wife present . . . . That there is no embarrassment whatever in getting money this friendly, confidential way. He would tell you that Household's method of making loans is as straightforward a business proposition as you could ask for . . . . that there is no red tape; no inquiring of friends, relatives or employer; and no fines, fees or deductions to hide the true cost and confuse you.

You will find Household Managers to be friendly, courteous advisers in all home financial problems. The experience gained in rendering family financial service for the past fifty-two years is back of these men. They will be glad to give you the benefit of this accumulated experience as well as their own training in arranging a budget plan to suit your needs.

Why should you humble yourself by appealing to friends for money or endorsements when the Household Loan Plan is available? We will give you as long as twenty months to repay your loan and charge you only for the actual time you keep the money. In addition to all these features, you make a worthwhile saving by borrowing from us, for our rate is nearly one-third lower than the lawful rate.

DROUGHT HURTS CORN IN KANSAS; PRIMARY NEARS

Farmers Feeding 60 Cent Wheat to Stock.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Topeka, Kas., July 20.—[Special.]—Kansas is a furnace and damage to the corn crop by the heat wave and drought is now affecting the wheat situation, which is the core of the political campaign for the primaries Aug. 5.

With the corn belt an oven, sweltering under temperatures of 102 and higher and the skies dry for weeks, the corn deterioration is now being spoken of as a possible aid in the wheat surplus problem. Reports are pouring in that farmers are feeding their 60 cent wheat to hogs and cattle. Some experts are urging that the federal farm board abandon its wheat acreage reduction plan and instead consider the advisability of seeking to get the wheat surplus set aside for feed. It's a new angle in the controversy over acreage curtailment, which has been raging between Alexander Legge, head of the farm board; Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, and Gov. Clyde M. Reed.

Farmers Hope for Rain.

Reports coming in from all parts of the state led agricultural authorities to declare the corn crop is in danger unless rain soon comes. In some churches today prayers were offered for showers to save the crops. Some sections have had no rain for six weeks, and counties which had prospects of big yields now report greatly reduced outlook; unless it rains soon.

Missouri and Iowa, too, in some sections, als are suffering from lack of tions, also are suffering from lack of up. Cornfields are parched. Even the golf courses in the cities have turned yellow.

Meanwhile the acreage reduction idea appears to be stirring up a bumper crop of resentment among the growers in western Kansas, judging from the letters on Gov. Reed's desk. The Kansas State Agriculture college starts its wheat demonstration train off tomorrow, and from all indications it is not going to preach the doctrine of acreage reduction in western Kansas, although in eastern Kansas it advocates wheat be used as a rotation crop.

Low Prices Predicted.

The college, in a bulletin, says the outlook for wheat prices during the next few years "indicates low prices."

In wheat politics interest just now centers in the position which Senators Arthur Capper and Henry Allen may take if Mr. Legge and the farm board, at the conference at Washington tomorrow, turn down the Capper-Allen proposal that the board buy 100,000,000 bushels of the new wheat crop. The impression among politicians here is that the board will adhere to its announced purpose of not buying more wheat. Both Capper and Allen are close to the administration, and the question here is whether they will back Gov. Reed or Chairman Legge in case their proposition does not prevail.

Gov. Reed in opposing the Legge-Hyde policy of wheat acreage reduction says, among other things, that it would injure the Kansas farmer to the benefit of the Canadian wheat raiser. As the leading opponent of the Legge idea, Reed argues the world has no surplus it cannot take care of. He cites the years 1927 and 1928, the years of world bumper crops, which left a heavy carry over, and then points to the drop in 1929.

Foresees Normal Condition.

"Experts have expressed the belief," says Gov. Reed, "that the relatively short crop of 1929 would cause the carry over produced by the plentiful crop of the two preceding years to disappear. In other words, at the end of this crop year the world wheat condition would be restored to a normal condition.

"So long as there is a reasonable probability of such an outcome, we should not seriously urge upon such a great industry as wheat growing a radical change in its operation. I can find nothing in the history of wheat production and marketing for the last thirty years that justifies such a policy."

As to freight rates and transportation costs, Gov. Reed says the largest increase in wheat production in the last generation has been in Canada, which is more unfavorably situated with regard to reaching the world market than is the Kansas winter wheat territory.

HUSTON IS EXPECTED TO GO AFTER SENATE SESSION TERMINATES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—The unusual case of Claudius H. Huston, chairman of the Republican national committee is expected to furnish the headlines from Washington in the period immediately after the adjournment of the special session of the senate on the naval treaty. Resignation of Mr. Huston either on request of the national committee or the President is expected to follow the departure of the senators from the capital.

Reports are now current that Senator George H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], chairman of the Republican senatorial committee and stanch supporter of Chairman Huston also will resign. A campaign to oust the New Hampshire senator, who is one of the leaders in the fight against the naval treaty, is under way. Thus far Senator Moses has survived the fight to deprive him of his chairmanship.

Pope Surprises Marchers by Giving Them His Blessing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 20.—Many hundreds of Romans were surprised this evening when they received papal blessing as they marched in a religious procession under the windows of the Vatican palace. Pope Pius smiled repeatedly to the kneeling crowd as he slowly drew the sign of the cross in the air. As the holy father withdrew brass bands in the procession struck up the papal anthem. The members of the procession were unaware of the pontiff's intention of giving a blessing.

MILK keeps.. your family health up!

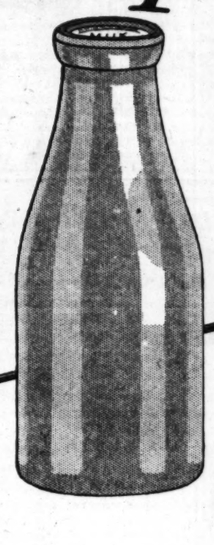
your eating costs down



How to economize on food is a popular topic these days. How to keep the bills down and still keep the family well, is a problem that is bothering many a mother . . .

FOR she knows that the most important economy she can make is to feed her family so that they will keep well and strong. Above all, she wants to avoid the after-costs of poor health or poor teeth that impaired nutrition almost surely brings.

Good news! There is a way to save money on the food bill — supply the nourishment the body demands — and continue to serve meals that everyone will enjoy. That way is—use enough milk each day.

Milk contains practically all the elements needed in building and maintaining bones, teeth, muscle and tissue.

To save money on food, use at least a quart of milk per day regularly, for each member of the family. Then the food bill will go down because the milk will supply practically one-fourth the daily food needs. Also the family's health will be assured.

In using a quart-a-day-for-each person, the milk should be served freely as a beverage and the adults should join the children in enjoying it. Then there are many delightful ways to use milk in cooking. Every cook-book has a host of dishes using milk — particularly soups, gravies, sauces, puddings, desserts, etc. Bread and milk or crackers and milk provide a satisfying meal, without preparation. It is the frequent lunch-time meal of many men and women—a favorite "'tween meal" pick-up with children.

If you have no regular milkman, get in touch with us by phone or letter and your neighborhood Borden milkman will call. He will be glad to leave milk at your door every morning to help you feed your family well at lower cost. Also he delivers eggs and cottage cheese—two other cheap foods that will help you keep up the family's health and keep down the cost of eating.

CHILE TO SLASH SALARIES FROM PRESIDENT DOWN

15% Cut Fixed; Free Cars Also Suppressed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 20.—Commencing Aug. 1, all public officials in Chile from President Carlos Ibanez and his cabinet, on down through the army and navy officers to the police, will be subject to a substantial cut in salary. This decision was announced by the Ibanez cabinet after a careful survey of the possible consequences to Chile, which might come from the world-wide trade depression.

While the general salary reduction will amount to 15 per cent, the individual reductions will be graded so that they do not fall too heavily on the married men. The state railway administration, operating as a separate entity, will not be affected by this decree, because the operatives had their pay cut a month ago in the general scheme of national economy.

Bars Free Automobiles.

The Ibanez government takes great pride in the present state of the national treasury, and in its determination that the present crisis shall not menace the budget equilibrium, other reductions in public expenses will be made at the same time as the cuts in salary go into effect.

Among these is the suppression of the use of free fiscal motor cars, excepting those cars used by cabinet officers and leading public service officials. All public functionaries, who have previously operated their cars at government expenses and wish to continue using them must pay their own motor bills starting Aug. 1. Chiefs of all departments have been ordered to submit proposals for 10 per cent reductions in their staff personnels.

Newspapers throughout the country are paying editorial tribute to President Ibanez' courage in effecting the budget reductions. Amazement has been expressed over the fact that the military departments have also fallen beneath the axe. Local observers say few presidents have been powerful enough to make such a drastic move independent of the army.

"A Precautionary Measure."

The general opinion expressed by the press here is that the reductions are merely a precautionary measure, as the country is not in condition to justify commercial alarm.

"The Chilean market is the briskest in South America, and for three consecutive years, we have shown a substantial budget surplus," El Mercurio says. "The present administration is to be congratulated on continuing its vital policy of maintaining balanced budgets before anything else. In this manner Chilean credit will preserve its historical place of first in South America."

MASS TROOPS IN CAIRO; FEAR RUMP PARLIAMENT ROW

LONDON, July 20.—(AP)—Cairo dispatches to the Daily Mail tonight reported that Egyptian troops had been concentrated in the capital to forestall trouble tomorrow if the Nationalist deputies attempt to hold a parliamentary session which Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha has forbidden. Many business men barricaded their shops and offices. Throughout Cairo there was a general feeling of apprehension and insecurity.

The Egyptian parliament, overwhelmingly Wafdist [nationalist], was recently dissolved by King Fuad, precipitating a constitutional crisis. Former Premier Nahas Pasha and other Wafd leaders have been touring the country making speeches, which in many cases have been the indirect cause of riots.

Nahas Pasha recently announced that the Wafd deputies were determined to hold a session of the chamber tomorrow, at which, according to reports, an attempt may be made to dethrone King Fuad. Trouble is feared because the riots last week at Alexandria, in which fourteen were killed and hundreds injured, have left the political situation very tense.

The Nine Hundred Block

BY KATHARINE HAVILAND TAYLOR

SYNOPSIS.

To the nine hundred block, with its sordid dwellings, moved gentle, lovely Theresa Ames and her mother, Mrs. Colt, under the watchful eye of Mrs. Baum, neighborhood gossip. Theresa makes friends with Katie Warner, who lives upstairs, and B. Jones, a reporter; also Johnny Deane, who left a home of wealth to make good for the girl to whom he regrets, since meeting Theresa, he is engaged. He has found employment painting automobiles. Theresa does typing at home to support herself and mother. Mrs. Colt encourages Billy Treadway, a rich bachelor beau of her girlhood, in his attentions to Theresa.

Theresa's father, Arnold Ames, married again after Theresa's mother divorced him and married Barrington Colt, who recently died. The father now has a belated desire to help his daughter, but his wife threatens to leave him if he does. He arranges with Harold Gale, a friend, to secretly give Theresa work.

Johnny Deane had determined not to tell Theresa of his love for her until he had broken his engagement, but does not keep his vow.

INSTALLMENT XIII.

YOUTH CALLS TO YOUTH.

"Tell me, Theresa—you don't mind ——"

"I—I don't—Johnny."

"Darling!"

He didn't kiss her lips again, but he kissed her hands quite thoroughly and a very little later he stumbled up the stair; dizzy, knocked out, crazy about her. Tears filled his eyes as he thought of the dress. Everything for her, everything, after—marriage.

"She's going to make me a decent man," he thought.

Theresa had crept into bed to pretend to sleep. She didn't want to talk to any one. She wanted to lie, eyes so pressed together that small wrinkles were upon pink lids—and remember.

"Please make me—a very good wife," she entreated. Then she crawled out of bed to repeat it on her knees.

Outside, the nine hundred block was being changed by the first real fall of snow. Elsie Colt, being driven home by the husband of a loyal old friend, confided to him her pleasure in Theresa's being settled, as she would be, soon. "Billy has talked with me," she said, "and frankly—beautifully. And a little more and my little girl will say yes, with all heart. She's so young—I have urged him to wait a little time. Dear Billy is so sweet in his love——"

Mrs. Baum stuck her grayed head out of an upper window.

She saw Mrs. Colt and another man; the man helped her up Mrs. Nulman's steps. He didn't go in; "Couldn't get him in, could yuh?" thought Mrs. Baum sharply. She closed her window with a bang. Getting into bed she decided that perhaps Mrs. Colt was pretty lonely, to excuse her a little. Christmas, even in Mrs. Baum's heart, and that thaw which comes to spirit as the old world freezes.

"Katie, you tell Miss Ames that if her beau gets fresh I'll fix him so he'll be useful in a sausage case and nothing else."

* * * * * * * * * * * *

On Friday evening at seven o'clock Theresa was arrayed in the yellow chiffon dress, lemon stockings, black slippers, and sundry other garments.

Billy Treadway's and love's offering of yellow roses had arrived at five. Proud in their box surrounded with dew sprinkled transparent green paper, they were now beneath the kitchen window where cream could be kept for a week without danger of souring. Theresa looked at them frequently to see that they weren't wilting.

At half after seven, her billowing skirt held high, she climbed the third floor stairs to show Katie how her dress looked—on; Katie, of course, had seen it off. Katie's door was open welcomingly. Katie looked up and over a sofa cushion upon which was growing a garden that looked as if a futurist had gone Burbank. For a moment Katie was silent; then she said slowly and under breath, "Hail Columbia! SAY!"

"Do you like it, Katie?" asked Theresa intensely. Her already flushed cheeks flushed a little more and the light in her eyes was increased by several watts.

"Turn around," Katie ordered in her rough, grating way.

Theresa turned, trembling a little. When an artist unveils a picture his hand is not quite steady unless he is very accustomed to the business.

"Well, I'll tell yuh this, kid, there won't be a woman there that won't hate yuh!" said Katie.

"O, I hope not that!" Theresa put in quickly, alarmed.

"The gents'll make up for it," said Katie. "They'll act like they all had a strong dose of catnip just from lookin' at yuh, and believe me plenty of 'em will have eye strain tomorrow! You got a real sweet little figger, honey."

Johnny opened his door in time to hear Katie's comment, and that he agreed with it—and heartily—he did not mention. Johnny's reaction was even nicer than had been Katie's. He reeled suddenly to sink limp against the door jamb, clasping one hand against his brow and the other above his heart.

"Katie—" he gasped, "she ought to break it gently!"

"You silly thing!" said Theresa, but she could not help smiling, although she tried very hard not to smile, and this fact made her look very young. Johnny moved toward her, hypnotized; Katie leaned over her work threading a needle with what she called "mesmerized silk." Johnny, stooping, lifted the edge of the yellow chiffon skirt to kiss it. "Hot dog!" thought Katie with a romantic sigh. It was "just like movin' pictures." And the way he looked at her—and she at him!

Johnny, now sighing too, stood erect to stare down at Theresa. She looked at the floor, at the window through which crept slits of chill, beyond which snow was heaped against a pane; she clasped and unclasped her hands.

"Might as well get used to it," said Johnny not quite steadily, "my looking at you——"

"O——" She breathed it softly.

"Katie," Johnny turned.

"Yep?"

"Katie, you tell Miss Ames that if her beau gets fresh I'll fix him so he'll be useful in a sausage case and for nothing else."

"Did yuh get that, kid?" Katie questioned.

"I got it," Theresa answered.

"Going to be a good girl?" he asked, directly and almost menacingly of Theresa.

"Why, Johnny," she said, amazed. It hit him pretty hard. Her eyes were adding—baffled at his lack of understanding—"Why, you know I love you!" She didn't know how to cheat, he saw. He had never met any one like her. He remarked this. Katie, who was more used to a direct method of courtship, whispered a rapturous, "O, boy!" Katie had had her dreams. Who of us has not?

Mrs. Colt called up rather shrilly. Reluctantly Theresa went down, but not before Johnny had kissed her hands and in the thorough, painstaking method that Theresa had made his—by her sweetness—doing it "right before Katie!" But Theresa couldn't mind. She threw two kisses backward and up from half way down the stairs and without that awkwardness that women usually evince when throwing.

Then the door of the Colt-Ames apartment closed and Katie's room grew chill.

Johnny brought forth a cigaret case he had "picked up in Vienna." He held it open toward Katie.

"Say, little brother," she asserted, "you're gettin' mixed in your dates. I ain't that kind of a girl."

"Sorry," he said, "didn't mean anything, Katie." He lit up with a "You don't mind?"

Katie didn't mind. She said she wasn't so crazy about having a man "chawin' around the place," but that cigarets "was different."

"Katie," Johnny began. "You've seen this old buzzard, haven't you?" Katie nodded, knowing that the subject of discussion was Billy Treadway. Johnny coughed. "What's he like?" he asked after a minute as casually as he could.

"Well," said Katie, "he's got them kind of front teeth that makes you expect to see him hoppin' around and picking up nuts and puttin' 'em in his cheek to carry off an' bury. In his body he's kinda more like a kangaroo. He ain't no pretty boy——"

"O, Katie, you're a dear!" said Johnny. He drew a deep breath to drop to a chair, his tension, somewhat diminished, permitting him to sit—on the edge of a chair.

"Johnny."

"Present."

"Johnny, she don't like him none, but her maw's tryin' to fix it. This Treadway guy's got enough for a long winter stored in the City bank. Mrs. Colt, she's at Theresa alla the time about it. I hear her sometimes, goin' by. The kid come to me not long back and she says, 'Katie, is it a woman's duty to subway herself?' or somethin' like that . . . meanin' to do somethin' she don't want to because her maw wants her to——"

"What did you say?"

"I says, 'When it comes to husbands, my Gawd no!'"

"Um—quite right."

Johnny puffed deep for a few moments on a cigaret that bore his initials.

"She intends to marry yuh," Katie went on. "I know, because she asked me—kinda offhand—the other day, whether it was hard to iron men's shirts."

Good morning!

If you've cared for Reginald Denny before, you will plus like him in this picture which is light weight comedy, deftly and amusingly handled.

A lady with a penchant for tramps is the cause of most of the story's action. She engages as chauffeur a young Englishman [Mr. Denny of course] who, equally of course, is anything BUT a chauffeur by birth and breeding. Can't tell you the sad story of his past here, though.

Mrs. Kilbourne has a shrewd and peppery husband, two daughters, one a—yes, a BRAT—with the gimmes!—aged about 12, the other a society belle, and a callow son. Son and elder daughter are in despair over mother's hobby and treat the new chauffeur as if he were poison. AT FIRST. Later—ah—later——!

Father throws a fit when he spies the handsome creature in uniform—but recovers suddenly and completely—and never mind why. Little sister takes him at once under her immature, but capable wing. Other servants in the Kilbourne household feel toward Rawlins as they might be expected to feel. Charles Coleman contributes a nice bit as the disapproving English butler.

Mr. Denny, heavier than of yore and wearing a mustache, gives a fine and convincing performance. His voice and accent are delightful. Harvey Clark as father and Anita Louise as little sister are clever. Others in the cast please well enough.

The action moves right along under capable direction and you will, I think, find "What a Man" to your liking in most ways.

See you tomorrow.

Marconi Father 4th Time; Queen to Be Godmother

CIVITAVECCHIA, Italy, July 20.—(AP)—Guglielmo Marconi today became a father for the fourth time. His second wife, the former Countess Cristina Bezzi-Scali, gave birth to a daughter, her first child. Mother and daughter were both reported to be progressing well in the Marconi villa, and it was announced that Queen Helena of Italy would be godmother to the child at baptism. The Italian inventor has been here for several months experimenting with short wave wireless aboard his yacht Electra. He married his present wife in 1926. He is 56 years old and she in her twenties.

PASTOR DECLARES U. S. IS SUFFERING FROM 'COST OF HIGH LIVING'

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—The United States as a nation is not suffering from the high cost of living but from "the cost of high living," the Right Rev. John Poyntz Tyler, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal district of North Dakota, declared in a sermon this morning in St. Thomas' Protestant Episcopal church on 5th avenue. He questioned why any one individual should want three automobiles.

Bishop Tyler, who is a native of Virginia, is the grandnephew of John Tyler, tenth President of the United States.

While Bishop Tyler, who will preach each Sunday until September in St. Thomas', was reading the prayers he was suddenly interrupted by a man in a pew who sat near the back of the church. The man could be heard throughout the edifice mumbling. The bishop paused and looked straight down at the interrupter. The man became quiet. Bishop Tyler said after the service that "some one was saying his prayers out loud."

"LOHENGRIN" CLOSES GERMAN DAY WITH OPERA AT RAVINIA

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Nothing but the heat wave interfered with Ravinia's German day yesterday afternoon and evening, and at that an uncommonly large delegation of music lovers decided that Ravinia was the most inviting spot on the north shore.

"Lohengrin" was presented for the first time of the season as the evening attraction, and it had many virtues, among them the presence of two surpassing artists, Elisabeth Rethberg as Elsa and Edward Johnson as Lohengrin.

It was said that Mme. Rethberg had been suffering with a throat affection during the day, but the information might as well have been kept secret, for apart from a disinclination to let out her voice at full force, she did some of the loveliest singing of the season. Her voice would seem to be compounded of quality and brains in about equal amounts, and of this compound her Elsa is the triumphant result.

Mr. Johnson was a superb Lohengrin, youthful, vigorous, excellent in song and with a peculiar gift of keeping himself and the character just remote enough from ordinary, mortal humanity to fit into the legendary magic of the story.

So with these two the piece went on to a marked success, having, however, some valuable assistance from the other members of the cast, Julia Claussen, Desire Defrere, Louis D'Angelo and George Cehanovsky. The chorus also made itself prominent among the good things of the performance, particularly in the scene just preceding Lohengrin's entrance and the women's ensemble in the bridal scene.

The afternoon attraction was a concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra, with Eric DeLamarter, of German music. Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony was the main number. Joseph H. Vito, harpist, was the soloist, and Dr. Paul Schwartz, acting consul general, spoke briefly but eloquently in two languages on the place in the world of German music.

Leader Lauds Students for Aid to Science

Prof. Pond, Back, Tells of the Logan-Beloit Trip.

Enthusiastic in his praise of the fourteen university students who were his assistants on an archeological expedition into the northern Sahara desert, Prof. Alonzo W. Pond of Beloit college returned to Chicago yesterday to report to Frank G. Logan, vice president of the Chicago Art institute, who financed the trip.

"It was the first time that college students were employed on such an expedition in a truly scientific capacity," Prof. Pond said. "These young men from Beloit college and the universities of Wisconsin, Northwestern, and Minnesota had no previous training and only a superficial knowledge of archeology, but they did splendid work. I was enabled with their assistance to do the work of ten years in one season."

Conclusions of vast importance in determining the origin of man are expected to be reached by Prof. Pond from the findings of the expedition. Thirty skeletons of more than 25,000 years ago and some 30,000 stone age implements were dug up by the seventeen members of the party.

Four 25,000 year old campsites were explored by the party, an average of 250 cubic feet of pre-historic ashes a day being sifted. The skeletons unearthed were taken from an undisturbed layer of snail shells and hearth sites.

From preliminary investigation, these ancient people were peaceful nomads, according to Prof. Pond. They lived largely on snails and such small animals as they could ensnare. No warlike implements such as arrows, spears, or daggers were found. Thousands of flint instruments, apparently used for cutting and scraping bone, wood, and skins, were found.

Fragments of skeletons of animals also were brought back in order to determine what animal life abounded in northern Africa in the stone age. Many specimens of charcoal will be submitted to botanists so that something may be discovered of the forests and plant life of the era.

For some years Prof. Pond has held the theory and supported it by his yearly expeditions into Africa that Africa and not Asia was the earliest home of ancient man and that the nomad snail eaters link up with the pre-historic folk of South Africa.

Iceland Endows Art of Sculptor Who Has Statue in the U. S.

BY JOHN S. STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

REYKJAVIK, June 28.—[By Mail.]—Most isolated of all countries, Iceland, under the arctic circle, has developed a culture second to none, far higher than most in Europe, with a minimum of outside influence. Icelandic art has been influenced, as far as painting is concerned by the French, but in sculpture Iceland has developed a school and a man in a class by themselves.

Einar Jonsson probably is the greatest sculptor living today and that he is not more widely known is due to the fact that he refuses to work to order. All his work is original in conception and expresses his own ideas and individuality. In America his best known work is his statue of Thorfinner Karlsefni, the Icelander, the first white man who attempted to colonize America. That statue stands in Fairmount park in Philadelphia.

Einar Jonsson probably is the only example in the world of an artist endowed by the state. The Icelandic government has built him a museum in Reykjavik which is entirely devoted to his work and has made him its curator for life. There he lives and works producing as the mood takes him, and surrounded by the beautiful things that he has created.

In the realm of the theater Iceland has produced one of Europe's greatest younger actresses in Ann Borg. She is a member of the Danish Royal Theater company, but is at present playing in Reykjavik with an amateur company in Johann Sigurjonsson's tragic drama, "Fjalla-Eyvindur."

In literature both ancient and modern Iceland has no reason to be ashamed. The sagas are known the world over and Iceland's modern writers and poets have a place in the first rank. Today Iceland produces more books per head of population than any country in Europe, while Reykjavik, with a population of only twenty-five thousand, supports three daily newspapers and a number of weeklies. Dailies are also published in some of the smaller towns of Iceland.

The secret of this tremendous intellectual activity is that there is no illiteracy in Iceland. Every Icelander cannot only read and write, but he can read understandingly and appreciate good literature. School attendance is compulsory from the age of 10 to 14, but it is the duty of the Icelandic mother to teach her children to read and do simple arithmetic before they reach school age.

TURK DISCOVERS HE'S IN THIRD CHILDHOOD AS HE VISITS AMERICA

New York, July 20.—[Special.]—Zaro Acha, the Moslem Methuselah, submitted to the first medical examination of his visit to this country today and discovered that he is in his third childhood.

His pink old pate, bald for a century except for a thinning stubble of gray, is sprouting a new growth of hair—thick black hair at that. Zaro sat in an easy chair in his suite at the Commodore and thoughtfully explored this further evidence of his rejuvenation with his hand. The new hairs stuck up like pinfeathers. He smiled his toothless smile and exclaimed:

"Yeh, yeh, it's as I said. I will live forever."

Perhaps this new youth which has come to Zaro Acha makes him overoptimistic. But the physician who visited him this morning expressed the belief, that the old man was good for fifteen or twenty years yet.

The physician specified before making his call that his name must not be made public. He declared that Zaro Acha appeared to be in splendid condition.

"I see no reason to doubt the claim that he is 156 years old," said the doctor.

Monday, a cording to Salvin Harris, Zaro Acha's American manager, a group of physicians will call on the claiment to the world's longevity championship and make arrangements for his examination by specialists in every branch of medicine.

Zaro Acha celebrated his third day in America by refusing a drink. He has been refusing a drink of liquor for 156 years, according to his friends, but today he refused it in front of a moving picture camera and accompanied it with a vigorous and spontaneous anti-alcohol speech. Notwithstanding that Assim Redvan, his sponsor, had asserted that Zaro had rejected the overtures of American drys to campaign for prohibition here, Zaro had been conducted to the roof of the Commodore with a group of friends to face the talking picture apparatus.

After he had told in Kurdistan how he missed his 66 year old bride, Kudret, but had had to leave her in Istanbul, because she was too old to stand the trip, he suddenly was confronted with a bottle of whisky thrust under his nose by Mr. Redvan.

"Wouldn't you like a little drink of thus," asked Redvan in Turkish.

"No, no!" he exclaimed. "I don't want it."

"Why not? It's good," insisted Mr. Redvan.

"No," reiterated the Turkish teetotaler.

"It would make me sick. It would make my head dizzy and I would fall down."

Too Little Is Spent for Older People, 10,000 Told at Picnic

Ten thousand Chicagoans of Swedish ancestry assembled yesterday for their annual outing on the grounds of the Swedish Societies' Old People's home, Evanston. Speakers were Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Evanston, Rodney Brandon, Illinois state director of public welfare; Oscar C. Lundquist, Swedish consul at Chicago; and Albert J. Appleton, president of the home.

"The home is in need of $500,000 for its present program," Mr. Appleton said. He pointed out that while the national appropriation for education is two and a half billion dollars annually, the money set aside for old peoples' homes and other charitable institutions comprises only a small fraction of that sum.

Mayor Bartlett welcomed the societies to Evanston, and Mr. Brandon lauded the work the home has been doing.

Penny week will be opened today by the Chicago Babies Free Milk Fund, of which Mrs. Ernest R. Graham is president and William R. Dawes treasurer. The proceeds will be used to buy milk for poor children.

Children passing along Michigan avenue yesterday afternoon climbed a ladder to the top of a milk bottle 50 feet high in Grant park, at Jackson boulevard, to drop their pennies. Stripes around the bottle will indicate each thousand dollars collected as the drive progresses.

Belgians Cheer War Veterans in Big Parade

Fete Recalls Founding of Their Kingdom.

Brussels, Belgium, July 20.—(AP)—Amid cheering crowds an army of former soldiers marched through flag decorated streets today in commemoration of the centenary of Belgium's independence.

Preceded by the war mothers and widows, many of whom were weeping, an impressive group of war blinded and mutilated, the latter in flower covered automobiles, appeared in the line of march. The veterans, with flying colors, and led by their former regimental chiefs in mufti, marched for two hours, halting en route to the palace to place wreaths on the unknown soldier's tomb.

Arriving at the royal palace, the procession marched past the soldier king of Belgium, who stood surrounded by military attachés from the allied countries' legations, and delegations representing their veterans.

After the king had conferred the grand cross of the Order of Leopold on some former soldiers, 150 modest heroes who had received the Order of Leopold on the battlefield were his guests at lunch. The duke of Brabant, Charles de Broqueville, minister of national defense, and Burgomaster Max also attended the lunch.

Before the victory march the queen handed the national colors to a group of war blinded who came to the gardens of the royal palace for the ceremony. They carried the colors in the parade. The king and queen had a comforting word for each of the maimed heroes.

On the occasion of the independence commemoration, the duke of Brabant received the medal of a voluntary combatant in the world war.

The medal was conferred by a royal decree, and the duke was promoted to the rank of major in the first grenadier regiment. Prince Leopold also is entitled to the same medal, as he enlisted in 1915 and endured the trench life. He was a sergeant when the armistice was signed.

It was in 1830 that the present Belgium broke away from the kingdom of the Netherlands, which had been established by the treaty of Vienna in 1815. After disturbances in August, 1830, a provisional government was established. William I. appealed to the great powers to intervene.

Celebrate in Chicago, too.

Prince and Princess Albert de Ligne spent yesterday in Chicago as guests of the Belgian colony, which celebrated the centenary of the independence of Belgium. The prince is the Belgian ambassador to the United States.

The principal celebration attended by the ambassador and his wife was held at St. John Berchman's church, 2517 Logan boulevard. A parade preceded high mass. Members of the Belgian society marched with the prince and princess and the Italian, French and Belgian consuls of Chicago.

In the afternoon, the prince and princess were guests at a reception in the Belden Stratford hotel. They will probably return to Washington today.

Speakers reviewed the history of Belgium up to 1830 when the Belgian provinces revolted against William Orange-Nassau, king of the Netherlands, who ruled over them, drove out the Dutch troops, and set up an independent sovereign state with Leopold, prince of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha as king.

In the 100 years since then, under Leopold I and II, and the present King Albert I., Belgium has prospered, the speakers said. Although but a small country with an area of about 12,000 square miles, i has extended its colonies throughout the world and in the Belgian Congo, with its copper, gold and diamond mines, has a great material asset.

Since the world war, it was said, Belgium's finances have been stabilized and its industry and commerce returned to more than pre-war proportions.

Isabel Greenlee, J. F. P. Farrar Are Engaged

BY THALIA

Mrs. William Brooks Greenlee sends the interesting message from the Greenlee ranch at Abiquiu, N. M., that she and Mr. Greenlee are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Isabel, to John F. P. Farrar, son of Mrs. Fentress Farrar of Memphis, Tenn., and that the wedding is to take place in the fall.

Miss Greenlee was one of the debutantes of the winter before last. At that time her parents gave a tea at the Fortnightly to present her to society. Since then she has been active in charitable and social affairs of the younger set.

She has been studying art, along with her other endeavors, and this last spring took a studio in the Italian court building with Barbara King and Dorothy Moorehead, who also are engaged in artistic pursuits.

She is an officer of the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids.

Mr. Farrar was graduated in 1925 from Cornell university. For several years after he finished school he was in Chicago and resided with his kinsfolk, the James Fentresses of Hubbard Woods. Last year his business took him to Pittsburgh, Pa.

Now that the Lake Forest children have had an opportunity to demonstrate their equestrian ability at the recent horse shows they are planning to vie for aquatic honors at the annual Winter club carnival to be held on Wednesday afternoon at the club pool.

As in former years the program will include a series of races and stunts for boys and girls all the way from the tiny tot to the sub-deb age. An orchestra will play between the races and refreshments will be served at their conclusion.

The affair is always attended by the mamas, papas, uncles, and aunts of the competing youngsters. The contestants will include Katherine Armstrong, Ellen Wacker, Dorothy Young, Durie Malcolm, Betty Lord, Barbara Mabbatt, Anita Smith, Edith Cowles, Priscilla Armstrong, Caryl Harrison, Betty Mead, Teddy Nicholson, Andrew Armstrong, Edward and George Bermingham Kent and Emmerson Chandler, Joe Mead, Frank Ambler, David Peck, and Robert Carton.

Mrs. William McCormick Blair of Lake Forest and her sons, Edward, William Jr., and Bowen, have gone to Bar Harbor, Me., to spend the remainder of the summer with Mrs. Blair's mother, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, at her summer place there.

The Robert A. Gardners of Lake Forest and their children have departed for their annual summer visit with Mrs. Gardner's mother, Mrs. Chauncey Keep, at her summer place at Camden, Me.

Mrs. John V. Farwell III. and her youngest child departed yesterday for a visit with her parents, the Mark Skinner Willings, at their plantation in Virginia. The other Farwell youngster is staying with his grandparents, the John V. Farwells, at their summer residence at Libertyville.

Miss Frieda Foltz of 37 East Division street has gone into the real estate business and has sent out cards announcing that she will specialize in north side and suburban property.

Mrs. John T. Pirie II. and her daughter of Winnetka visited Mrs. Pirie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Quarles, in Milwaukee last week.

The W. Dirk Van Ingens of Milwaukee were here for the week-end to attend the Fort Sheridan horse show, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hopkins in Highland Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Ehret have returned to Pittsburgh after a visit with Mrs. Ehret's father, Clayton Mark, in Lake Forest.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., July 20.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover had a few friends in for supper tonight.

Vice President Curtis and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Gann, are entertaining the former's son-in-law, Maj. C. P. George Jr. of Fort Sill, Okla., who is spending a few days here en route from his post to his summer home at Siasconset, Mass., to join his family. In the fall when they close their cottage there, they will come to Washington, where Maj. George is ordered for duty.

Secretary Mellon is spending the week-end at his home in Pittsburgh.

Attorney General Mitchell went to the cabinet camp on the Rapidan to spend the week-end. He has as his guest there the assistant attorney general and Mrs. Seth W. Richardson. Mrs. Mitchell, who has been in their home in St. Paul since the early summer, is en route to Washington and will arrive here Tuesday morning.

Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick, who spent the winter in her new home in Georgetown, is having a swimming pool installed on some additional lots recently purchased, adjoining her home. She also is building a recreation house to be used for dancing and for her informal Sunday evening suppers, which are famous in Washington.

News has just been received by friends here of the birth in London of a son to Capt. and Mrs. Sydney Bailey, the latter formerly Miss Mildred Bromwell, granddaughter of the late Mrs. Matthew T. Scott of Bloomington, Ill.

Methodist Hints Dry Law Is Wrong Way to Get Temperance

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Bishop H. Lester Smith of the Tennessee area of the Methodist Episcopal church yesterday declared that dangers are to be found in the country's prohibition laws.

Speaking at the Des Plaines camp meeting, he pointed to the problem of "compelled goodness" that results from such kinds of legislation and warned his hearers against "throttling or smothering temptation."

The Tennessee bishop asserted, however, that there is a certain value in "unpopular legislation," and contended that the state has a right to say that a man shall not live in a way detrimental to him. Bishop Smith also contended that the state has a right to do what is good for him, but urged that some other way of overcoming temptation than by throttling it be used.

"I am of the opinion that temptation is a normal experience—a divinely intended experience," Bishop Smith said. "We must learn to live wholesomely rather than to learn how to kill ourselves by inches."

Bishop Smith's address last night closed the 71st annual Des Plaines camp meeting. According to the Rev. Charles H. Draper, camp manager, the attendance at the sessions just closed has exceeded his expectations, and he declared that in interest and general success the session just closed is regarded as being as successful as any in the long history of the meetings. The Rev. Mr. Draper announced an Epworth league institute, which will open at the camp ground today.

Forty-eight other Gold Star mothers from the West and Northwest passed through Chicago yesterday on their way to New York. They will sail for France to visit the graves of their sons. Fourteen were from St. Paul coming here on the North Western Limited, while 16 were from Utah and Oregon. There were still delegations from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and North Dakota.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Need Clothing.

"I have five children. The boys are 9 and 3 and the girls are twins, 7 years old and a baby 10 months. My husband is working only three days a week and he makes hardly enough for us to live on. Do you think you could get some clothing for myself and the children? I wear size 38. P. B."

The earnings from three days' labor is hardly sufficient to care for a family of this size and leaves nothing at all for their clothing. Can you supply them with what they need?

Flowered Pajamas for Business Girl's Play

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The pajama season is in full swing, and, in spite of the increased femininity of fashions, pajamas are more popular than ever. They have followed the prettifying lead of other clothes; they have trousers so full and flaring that they outskirt many a frock and they sport dainty blouses and delectable capes in the best ensemble manner.

There is no doubt that pajamas are the most comfortable hot weather attire, particularly when they are made of soft, light material such as cotton crêpe, triple georgette, or one of the new alpacas.

The hot weather pajamas from Blanche Lebouvier, sketched above, will prove useful to the business girl on her summer vacation, for they may be worn with equal becomingness and ease on the beach, for working in the garden, if she be horticulturally inclined, or for lounging pajamas in her apartment when she comes back to town.

They're made of brown and yellow flowered crêpe, and the sleeveless tuck-in blouse is of plain yellow muslin. The little detachable capelet continues into crossed suspenders that join two box plaits running down the front of the trousers that are stitched to just below the knee. Two more box plaits let in at each side from the same point add an extra flare. The shady hat, of yellow muslin like the blouse, is stitched and starched to hold its shape. Mary Nowitsky's cork beach clogs complete the ensemble.

Ravinia Party Sally's Latest Plan for Kids

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Can you imagine anything more delightful, girls and boys, than a summer afternoon spent at Ravinia park, one of the most beautiful spots in this part of the country? It's where our next party of the season is to be. Louis Eckstein, president of the Ravinia company, has asked me to bring one hundred of you to it. It will be "Army and Navy" day at the north shore opera in the woods on July 31, and the show promises to be extremely interesting.

Chief among the features of the afternoon will be the army drill in which the boys from Fort Sheridan take part; the navy drill, a magnificent performance by the Great Lakes Naval Reserves, and the marine wall scaling. There will be two bands to give us a fine program of music which will be especially good for I know how popular both the soldiers' and sailors' bands are. There are many other numbers, too, which I can't tell you about now but I can promise you that you will enjoy them immensely.

One of the nicest things about the afternoon is that the show will take place out in the open, on the picturesque arena formed by huge shade trees and green shrubbery. If it's a warm afternoon, we'll escape the heat and dust of the city for out Ravinia way everything is cool and green.

Even our ride will be fun. We will travel in private cars which Mr. Britton I. Budd, president of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad, is providing for us and our party will start the moment we board the trains. The trip is a lovely, picturesque one. It will take us through Chicago—at a good rate of speed, I can tell you—and into the beautiful north shore suburbs noted for their exquisite scenery.

Of course, you'll all want to go to the Ravinia party and since I can take only fifty girls and fifty boys, I shall want my guests to be those who are most anxious to join. Make your letters emphatic and convincing, and be sure to follow the rules:

Do not ask for an invitation for any one except yourself. If your younger brother, or sister, or your dearest chum wants to go to the party he or she must write a letter, too. Tell me your name, address, and age, and have your letter reach me no later than Thursday morning.

Happy Summer Baby Needs Best Physical Care

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

A booklet on sex education will be sent by Mrs. Bevans on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ordinarily our column does not intend to go into the matter of the physical care of children. But because the physical and the psychological are so often tied up together—because disposition and behavior so often depend on the condition of a child's body—it is impossible to keep from overlapping onto the matter of physical care, especially in the summer.

Although we have colds and kindred ailments to combat in the winter, in some ways summer is a time requiring greater watchfulness for those who are in charge of babies and little children.

One reason is that these young ones haven't the stamina or endurance of older children. The early years are the time when their strength or vitality—call it what you will—has to be conserved. In summer, especially, this is true, when because of a certain relaxation that comes to all of us we are apt to relax our vigilance.

Or, we may have been alert, to the present date, then slump a little and think, "O, well, the summer's half gone, and all's well"—and grow careless.

We still have the hot month of August and the early hot part of September ahead of us—which means that to keep the children well and also to lay up a reserve store of health for them we must continue to keep in mind certain essentials of physical care. Some of these it takes more effort to bring about in summer than in cooler weather. Nevertheless, here they are:

To keep well, your baby and your runabout children especially should have the right food.

They should be kept clean. One hesitates to say that, these days, because most mothers make a fetish of cleanliness anyhow.

They should plenty of rest and sleep.

They should have sun baths, if possible.

Their bodily temperature should be kept as even as possible—that is, they should not be overheated, over excited, or suddenly chilled. This applies especially to babies.

Pedal a Bicycle If You'd Acquire Slender Ankles

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

It was in the paper, so it must be true, as a dear old soul used to say, whether it was the tale of a live plush elephant or a sea going rocking chair.

Anyway, what was in the paper was that one of our most adored and adorable movie stars relies on a bicycle to keep her figure—the leg part of it, at least. Before she achieved the own your own million dollar motor status, said young aspirant used to peddle around from studio door to its next inhospitable neighbor. And so the bicycle habit was born and, according to what was seen in the paper, it was a habit the young idol has not been able to shake off though her liveried chauffeur beckons his lady to occupy the rear half of his beautiful motor. The star's fortitude in the face of temptation is maintained because if those ankles of hers get to measuring the fraction of an inch more than they do now, there may be no chauffeur to beckon.

And here's another. Not from movieland, but from Bermuda where bicycling still maintains its dignity, so long as one remains seated! A woman who spent all last winter down there—in fact, only left in May—told it to me, exhibiting as neat a pair of underpinnings as eyes need care to look upon. They weren't like that when she left New York, the lady avers. Not by a couple of inches from ankle to skirt edge [last year's skirt's edge]. The bicycling did it.

While it does not seem feasible to advocate a general revival of the bike until more motorists become aviators, and their families along with them—still, if you are looking for a good leg and ankle reducer the two wheeled vehicle of the bloomer age is nothing to set scorn by. You can't let it loose around the house, it's true. Not if you've got an antique that's none too steady on its pins already.

And since back yards to most of us are fire escapes and trafficless side streets "ain't," I don't know that even bringing bicycles up as a way to neater pedal extremities is so very bright. But I just thought if you were vacationing, maybe you could find a deserted mountain or roadside, or some place to try out the pedaling. If not, there's always space on the parlor floor upon which you can execute the bicycle leg movements. Not so good as the real thing—but not bad, either, for shaking off the fat or putting on a layer, as the case may need.

French Boy Scouts Lauded by Tardieu, Aided by Americans

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, July 20.—Premier André Tardieu paid special tribute today to Miss Anne Morgan and the late Mrs. Ann Murray Dike for their generous aid to the Boy Scout movement in France. He conferred the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor on Canon Cornette, organizer and head of the French Boy Scouts.

M. Tardieu spoke of France's pride in the growth of the Scout movement since 1914, when the membership was barely 7,000. Today there are more than 35,000 French Boy Scouts.

"I was indeed happy," M. Tardieu declared, "to be associated with Miss Morgan and the late Mrs. Ann Murray Dike as honorary president of the American committee for the relief of devastated France, which interested itself in the organization of the Scout movement in France and the creation of a scoutmasters' camp at Capy."

Borrowing Money from Married Man Dangerous Business

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I recently had to borrow some money (a small amount). I naturally turned to the man in whose home I had lived for over a year, and who knew the circumstances under which I have fought my way through high school and two years of college. I naturally believed wholeheartedly in him. I wrote and asked to borrow that money until September. I received a reply at once and the check. The letter was genial enough, but added this:

"'Would like to see you. Glad you have a job for the summer in work that you like. Write Mrs. ——— and tell her about yourself. I am not going to show her your letter or say anything to any one about the money. If you write her then I will not make any slip at home by mentioning anything about hearing from you.'"

"Now, what shall I do? I wouldn't for the world want to hurt his wife—or do anything that might cause a rift in the family. What I did was done with a business air. He was to loan me the money until September, interest paid. Should I return the money? I need it badly right now.

"BETTINA."

If you were older, Bettina, you would realize that borrowing money from a man friend is ticklish business. From a married man on whose friendship you are operating—a rather dangerous business. The paragraph of the letter you quote is just about the best lesson such a borrowing experiment can provide. It is an awkward situation to put a married man in and nobody knows its awkwardness better than he.

He can't explain that "straight business" transaction to his wife, wives being a suspicious brood. Her first query will be: "If it is that straight a business transaction, why wasn't I in on it?" And why wasn't she, if you lived in the home with her and him? Was there a surreptitious sort of "friendship" between you and the man. That's what I ask—and certainly what the wife would ask.

I would make haste to return the money, with interest, so as to dissipate any further embarrassment and also to set you right in the man's mind. There's a peculiar male analysis of the woman borrower who plies the loan on a friendship basis. There's a reason for it, which we do not need to go into here. Not with all men, it is true, but with enough of them to make it a risky position for a young woman to put herself in no matter how the circumstances seem to justify the request.

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Who Started It?

"Dear Miss Blake: I had a quarrel with my boy friend. He tells his sister that he wants me to give in. Should I? ANNABELLE."

If you provoked the quarrel then I'd say you should be the one to give in.

Concert on Lard.

An old school chum of mine was invited to supper at our home. After we had a long chat we decided to go to a concert with my brother where he was to play the saxophone. We had been shown to our seats, and the music started when my chum asked me for the recipes of the bran biscuits we had. I had to talk at the top of my voice because the music was on. I had just about finished saying "and 2 tablespoons of melted lard," and I was so absorbed in telling her the recipe that I did not hear the music stop. Imagine my embarrassment when every one started to laugh. I had to walk out. E. DE J.

Food Talk.

Some women make icing to cover up poor cake. Others put it on the best of cake for some spoiled member of the family who refuses to eat it without icing. The finest icing will not atone for poor cake. Neither will it improve the diet of these hard to please individuals. Plain cake excellently made, and eaten when it has just cooled, is delicious enough.

There are, nevertheless, two excuses for icings. They add a decorative note and they keep the cake moist. [Icings tremendously increase the fuel value of cake, which is a bad feature for the fat and the dyspeptic.]

If we busy women must make icings, then let us have those which can be put together in a few minutes and spread on the cake immediately. There is no fun in making an icing that requires as much as or more time and labor than the cake itself.

Most delicious icings may be made of fondant and fudges. If you make these occasionally and perfectly, mold some of either into a soft kneaded ball, put into a tightly covered container and store away in some cool place. When ready to ice the cake, melt the fondant or fudge over warm [not hot] water in a double boiler, then spread quickly over the cake just cooled.

Or easier still, a tablespoon of cream or evaporated milk may be added to the fudge and the mass worked until smooth. If this is spread on a slightly warm cake the heat will melt the fudge just enough to give it a shiny surface.

Confectioner's sugar is another boon to the making of cake icings. All that is necessary is to add to some smoothly creamed fresh butter, a little cream or evaporated milk and enough confectioner's sugar to give a spreading consistency. Various colors, flavorings, chocolate, nuts, or fruits may be added to enhance the simple icing.

A DELICIOUS ICING

CHOCOLATE BUTTER ICING.

1¼ squares chocolate
1½ cups confectioner's sugar
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons cream
½ teaspoon vanilla

Melt chocolate in the top of a double boiler over hot water. Cool. Cream the butter. Add sugar and cream alternately in about four portions. Beat thoroughly. Add chocolate and vanilla. Spread on the cake.

Yield: Sufficient for two 8 inch round layers. On serving: Total, 158 calories—protein, 3 calories; fat, 47 calories; carbohydrates, 108 calories.

SOX WIN PAIR; CUBS LOSE TO GIANTS, 13 TO 5

21 HITS HELP LYONS DEFEAT BOSTON, 16 TO 4

Hose Take Nightcap in Ninth, 5 to 4.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Because of the persistency with which Carl Reynolds applied his bat during the waning minutes yesterday the White Sox were able to accomplish the unusual feat of taking both portions of a double header from the Boston variety of hosiery, by scores of 16 to 4 and 5 to 4.

Runs were gathered in such profusion right from the start of the first game that no individual heroics were necessary to give Ted Lyons his fourteenth winning achievement of the season, but the nightcap was vastly different. The home Sox were unexpectedly suppressed as hitters, whereas the meek visitors rose up in their anguish in the seventh and took a two run lead on Pat Caraway. A homer by a youth named Reeves was responsible for this. It was then that Reynolds took charge. With a triple he brought about a tie in the home half, and then in the ninth exploded a single which nudged home the deciding run and gave Hal McKain credit for the game.

Watwood Hits Double.

When the last inning of the second game opened Watwood displayed unmistakable intentions of dissolving the 4 to 4 tie. He led off with a hot hopper past Regan at second. It rolled far enough to let the runner reach second. Mulleavy contributed a bunt and Berry tried to nail Watwood at third, but the throw was late. The infield drew in, as is customary, and Gaston, who shortly before had relieved Smith, started the attempt to pitch himself out of the hole. Reynolds converted one of the throws into a single through short and Watwood loped over the plate.

Bush's Sox swung with such deadly accuracy in the first battle that they surprised even themselves with a grand total of 21 hits. They put this scheme into effect in the opening inning and continued in the next. This gave Lyons a 4 to 0 lead, and he nursed it carefully until six more were added in the fifth, when Russell, the Boston starter, vanished under pressure. After this Lyons let the Boston boys have a few runs for their trouble, and the victors continued to pad their averages with one in the sixth and five in the eighth.

Thomas for the White Sox and Lisenbee for the Red Sox are to-day's pitching nominees.

FIRST GAME

The Sox had the first game won almost before Boston realized the day's work had started. Three runs went over against Russell in the first inning. Watwood single and Mulleavy survived on a fumble by Todt. A two bagger by Reynolds scored Watwood and the other two were sent home on a single by Jolley. Another registered in the second inning. Crouse opened with a double and rode home when Watwood nicked Russell for another single.

Get Six Hits in a Row.

In the scoring of a cluster of six in the fifth the Pale Hose peeled off a half dozen hits before anybody was retired. Singles by Mulleavy and Reynolds started the disturbance. Jolley scored one of them with a double. Barnes pushed a single into center, Reynolds and Jolley coming home. Cissell kept it going with a single, so Russell picked up his tools and went home. As soon as Rescuer Bushey pitched one Ryan slapped it for three bases, Barnes and Cissell crossing the counter. Ryan hiked home while Crouse was being thrown out. Reynolds' single and Barnes' double scored another in the sixth.

The Boston breed of hosiery was permitted to amuse itself with two runs in the sixth. Doubles by Regan, Durst and Miller did this. They scored another in the eighth when Regan singled and moved around on Durst's hit and Miller's sacrifice fly. Then

215 GOLFERS TEE OFF IN WESTERN AMATEUR TODAY

Half a Dozen Appear to Have Equal Chance.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

The 215 golfers who begin play today at the Beverly Country club for the Western amateur championship present a puzzling problem to any one who attempts to pick a winner. Half a dozen appear to have an equal chance, and another dozen have the ability to take the title if they should get a few lucky breaks.

The list of prime favorites includes eight who already have proved their mettle by winning important championships. There are Cyril Tolley, who won the British amateur crown last season, and T. P. Perkins, who did the same in 1928. There are Jack Westland, Chicago district champion, and Bob McCrary, who holds the trans-Mississippi title. And there are Dick Martin, who wears the Big Ten crown; Chick Evans, who has won the Western amateur eight times, and Keefe Carter, who took this title in 1925. At the top is Don Moe of Portland, Ore., the defending champion.

Johnny Goodman Withdraws.

Just outside of this circle is Larry Moller of Notre Dame, who went to the finals of the national intercollegiate tournament last month. Johnny Goodman of Omaha, who defeated Bobby Jones in the National amateur last year at Pebble Beach, wired yesterday that he was "golfed out" and canceled his entry.

Always ready to shoot into the lead if the favorites should falter are such skillful campaigners as Ira Couch, Art Sweet, Gus Novotny, Burton Mudge, Johnny Lehman, Rial Rolfe, John McKinley and numerous others.

So Don Moe may expect to be forced to the limit if he is to emerge from the tournament Saturday with the crown still upon his head.

Tolley, who never is at his best in hot weather, says he may withdraw if the heat remains so intense.

Moe Exempt from Qualifying.

Don Moe is exempt from the qualifying competition by virtue of holding the title. Billy Sixty of Milwaukee and Art Sweet of the Ridgemoor Country club will step up to the tee at 28 minutes past 7 this morning and start the big parade over the Beverly fairways. Other pairs will follow at four minute intervals until Leonard Casale of St. Louis and Al Cohen of Twin Orchard bring up the rear at 2:36 p. m.

Eighteen holes will be played today and another 18 tomorrow. Then the low 31 will be picked, and these, together with Don Moe, will make up the field which will begin match play for the championship. A 36 hole final on Saturday will determine the title holder.

Today Is Last Opportunity to Enter Swim

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Today is the last opportunity for Chicago's boys and girls to enter THE TRIBUNE's 100 yard races next Sunday afternoon in the Lincoln park lagoon. While entries close today, all letters postmarked July 21 will be accepted. All between the ages of 12 and 15, inclusive, are eligible.

With more than 900 entries listed, it is probable that the number will be more than 1,000 by tonight. Each of these swimmers will earn a merit badge if he finishes the 100 yard course. All contestants will report for their numbers at noon Sunday. The first heat will start at 2 o'clock.

K. of C. Director Enters 22.

Erwin Grau, physical director at the Knights of Columbus West Side club house, has entered 22 for the races. Many of the boys eligible for the 14 and 15 year old class are now at camp or his entry list would have been larger.

Louis Tortorelli, instructor at Dvorak park, sent in an entry of eight boys yesterday. He has nominated four in each class.

R. S. Armstrong, assistant physical director of the Lincoln-Belmont Y. M. C. A., will have six boys competing for merit badges next Sunday.

Although championship awards will be given in each division, most of the swimmers are concerned with earning merit badges. "I am eager to get a badge," Bernard Lewis writes. "I can swim a mile and I earned my Red Cross Junior Life Guard badge last year at Manley Junior High, but I want this badge to prove my ability."

Miami Girl in Senior Race.

Alice Novak, a member of the Fisher High school swimming team, Miami Beach, Fla., has entered the senior girls race. Alice is spending the summer at New Buffalo, Mich. In a meet with Ponce de Leon High school at Miami Beach just before school was dismissed Alice led her team in scoring with 17 points. She won the 50 yard free style, 100 yard free style and 50 yard back stroke events.

There is no limit to the number who may enter these swim tests. If you haven't entered and wish a merit badge, or believe you have a chance to win the championship trophy, clip out the entry blank and mail it today. It's your last opportunity.

Tilden to Play Against France with American Davis Cup Team

Philadelphia, Pa., July 20.—(AP)—William T. Tilden, hero of many Davis cup tennis matches, again will be a member of the United States team in the challenge round against France. This was announced tonight by Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the United States Davis cup committee.

Others selected to represent America in the challenge round are George Lott of Chicago, Wilmer Allison of Fort Worth, Tex., and John Van Ryn of Princeton. No announcement as to the probable lineup of the team was made, but it appears almost certain that Tilden and Lott will carry the singles burden, while Van Ryn and Allison will be paired in the doubles. Mr. Wear said the definite selection would be left to Fitz-Eugene Dixon, non-playing captain of the team, and that it probably would not be announced until 24 hours before the start of the matches.

Fulfills Wear's Prediction.

Despite the Philadelphia veteran's announcement that he would not become a member of the American team because of his contract with a news syndicate to "cover" the matches, Mr. Wear had stated many times that he felt certain Tilden eventually would yield to the wishes of himself and other members of the Davis cup committee.

As chairman of the committee, Mr. Wear said he had given Tilden permission to write tennis articles on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday prior to the opening of the challenge round, but that on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, when the matches are in progress, he would do no writing. This arrangement, Mr. Wear stated, would in no way break the player-writer rule.

YANKS BEAT ITALY, 4-1

AUTEUIL, France, July 20.—(AP)—Dividing the last two singles matches, America's youthful Davis cup tennis team brushed aside Italy today, four matches to one, and gained the challenge round with France.

George Lott of Chicago gave America its fourth successive victory in the series when he defeated Georgio de Stefani, ambidextrous Italian, in straight sets, 6-3, 6-1, 6-3, but the final point of the tie went to Italy when Baron Humbert L de Morpurgo, ace of the Italian team, defeated Wilmer Allison of Fort Worth, Tex., 7-5, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4. Today's matches were in the nature of exhibitions, for the United States had clinched the series by winning the doubles yesterday.

The challenge round against France, holders of the cup for three years, will be played Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

Although the final singles matches played no part in the net result, they provided the fans with the toughest tennis they had seen since Allison took the court in the first match against De Stefani on Friday.

EIGHT BOATS PASS POINT SAUBLE IN MACKINAC RACE

Ludington, Mich., July 20.—[Special.]—Eight boats competing in the 331 mile race from Chicago to Mackinac passed off Big Point Sauble, Mich., shortly before 9 o'clock this evening. The Dorello of Milwaukee, Vagabond of Milwaukee, the Intrepid, the Illinois, and the sloop Seboomook were closely bunched, only a short distance off shore.

The other boats were standing far out in the lake and could not be identified.

SHAMROCK HELD UP 2D TIME BY ROUGH WEATHER

LONDON, July 20.—(AP)—The Daily Mail tonight reported that Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Shamrock V. had been forced to take shelter in Brixham harbor, Devonshire, this evening from rough weather in the channel.

After remaining all night under the lee of the Isle of Wight in Spithead roads, the yacht had made another start this morning on her trans-Atlantic voyage to the United States. She was under convoy of Sir Thomas' steam yacht Erin.

BUSINESS SINS BEGIN TO TELL ON BALL MAGNATES

Blase Fans May Cause Cards to Play at Night.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—The Brooklyn ball club has been compelled to turn away much cash business this season, to the great distress of the stockholders, but there are several other points on the major league itinerary where it seems impossible to obtain a quorum with any lure. This also causes distress, so, altogether, the magnate's life probably is a most unhappy one.

The subject of the nonattendance of the cash patron is receiving their earnest consideration, and when they gathered in Chicago recently to discuss the matter of drafting minor league athletes they also dwelt upon the mournful numbers of the turnstile readings taken this season in Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Pittsburgh.

St. Louis is the point of special concern because, there being two clubs there, both playing to vast numbers of absentees, the trouble is twice as bad as it is anywhere else. The St. Louis patrons seem to have renounced baseball with popular unanimity except as to complimentary admissions, which yield no dividends.

May Play Night Games.

Sam Breadon, the owner of the Cardinals, has now invested $25,000 in a lighting plant for use in Houston, Tex., where there is a branch house of his chain store system of ball clubs and this apparatus if successful will be duplicated in St. Louis this year unless the customers return of their own accord. Earlier in the present season, when baseball after dark was first tried in Des Moines and a few other minor league cities, the major league proprietors bethought themselves of the traditions of their business and said the night time belonged to actors, burglars, and dog track promoters, who form a sort of auxiliary of the burgling profession, so they refused to consider trespassing on the time which, by right of custom, was allotted to others.

But after the Chicago conference on the subject of the draft one of the proprietors who assisted in these deliberations told your correspondent that the subject of the nonattendance of the customers, especially in St. Louis, had engaged the attention of all present in solemn, though informal, discussions.

"And I will predict," said he, "that if Mr. Breadon's lighting plant operates successfully in the Houston experiment, there will be baseball by night in the National league in St. Louis before this season is over."

There's Plenty of Competition.

The St. Louis firms are suffering to some extent from the competition maintained on the sinful shore of the Mississippi river in Illinois, where a horse track runs by day, in season, luring the patrons from the ball yards with their funds during baseball hours and several dog tracks have been operating at night, subtracting from the customers any funds which may not have been spent, lost, or otherwise dissipated at the horse track.

In some degree, the chancy pleasures of the Illinois side doubtless do divert the customers from the innocent and inexpensive pastime of the ball yards, but it also seems worth considering that the St. Louis patrons may be a little rebellious against the arbitrary management of their teams by boardroom strategists. They were led to believe that Rogers Hornsby was the world's greatest human being one season not long ago and the entire city lost its poise and several nights' sleep observing his triumph when the Cardinals won their first pennant.

But the next year, Mr. Hornsby was dismissed and the patrons naturally suspected that they had been imposed upon. Either Hornsby was not a great man and they had been induced to make themselves ridiculous for an un-

Mack Sees Cubs as World Series Foes

BY ARCH WARD.

The 1930 world series will be played between the Chicago Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics. If you don't believe it ask Connie Mack. The 67 year old leader of the world champions made the prediction last week when his club was battling the White Sox.

"You know, I was a little worried about my boys until we started this trip through the west. The pitchers were a bit unsteady and the club was not hitting as it should," Mack commented. "But they are beginning to click now. From now on we will be hard to beat.

"Washington, of course, is the team that will push us for the title. I predicted after the first series with the Senators that they were going to be hard to shake off. I see no reason to change that forecast.

"Who do I think will win the National league pennant? I'll go on record as picking the Cubs. They seem to have more bottom than the Robins. You can't count the Giants out of the race, however. They will be dangerous to the last."

Spry as a man 20 years younger, Connie has no idea when he will retire from baseball. If his present physical condition is a guarantee of the future he will carry on for several years.

He still likes to talk about the last world series.

"We unquestionably got the breaks," he explains. "Any one who saw the games knows that a few plays could have changed the outcome. It takes a strong club plus the breaks to win a world series.

"You hear everybody talking about the great game that Howard Ehmke pitched in the opening encounter, but do you know who I think hurled the best ball of the series? It was George Earnshaw. That probably sounds a bit strange as he lost the game to which I refer, 3 to 1.

"Earnshaw deserved to win, 1 to 0. Boley for some unaccountable reason failed to make a play in the sixth inning that would have resulted in a double killing. I don't know why he played the ball as he did and I never have asked him. There was no use talking about his mistake after it was made."

Asked why he decided to start Ehmke in the opening game instead of Grove, Walberg, or Earnshaw, Mack answered:

"That's rather a long story. First, you would have to get the background of Ehmke's career with the Athletics.

"I made a trade with the Boston Red Sox for Ehmke in 1926. He had a bad year with Boston the previous season, winning only nine games while losing 20, but he was going better the year we landed him. A few days after the trade he informed me he had a lame arm and needed rest. I told him to take as long as he needed, that I didn't care whether he pitched a game the remainder of the season. I was looking to 1927, when I expected to have a club that would be in the fight for the pennant.

"Ehmke came back the next year with a record of 12 victories and 10 defeats. He did fairly well in 1928, although I wasn't able to use him frequently. It was obvious to me last year that he was about through,

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—The surprising baseball game between the Giants and the Cubs this afternoon was not conducted under the auspices of the New York boxing commission, all the mysterious phases thereof notwithstanding. It perhaps better simply to say that the Giants won, 13 to 5.

The first surprise came when Bush was started after two days' rest with Malone apparently ready after a four day rest. But the climax was not reached in the amazing spectacle until Al Shealy was sent in as a relief with the Cubs only one run behind and six innings to play, and permitted to remain until the Giants had made six hits and five runs. Five of the hits were made by the first five men to face Shealy in the fourth inning. Then after the first put out, Roettger tripled with two on, and Manager McCarthy decided Al wasn't effective and sent in Nelson.

Not Second Guessing.

Our business is writing pieces for the paper and not managing the Cubs, of course. We do not second guess the manager once a year and don't care to now, even after watching the sad defeat this afternoon. Today's ball game was not fought with any such determination as characterized the series in Brooklyn. The Cubs were outfielded and outhit, in addition to being outpitched, and suffered in consequence. Eight New York runs became possible when infield lapses gave the enemy an opening.

The outcome today had no effect on the pennant race, the Cubs maintaining their virtual tie with the Brooklyn Robins. And business, which suffered a fall off as a result of the Giants' loss of a double header yesterday, is expected to pick up as a result of the New York triumph this afternoon.

Hack Gets No. 27.

Malone surely will be called upon to pitch tomorrow and probably will be opposed by Chaplin. This will make way for Teachout and Root in Tuesday's double header.

The only gratifying item in the game this afternoon was the fact that Hack Wilson made his 27th home run of the season, to give the Cubs a 4 to 0 lead in the second inning.

Blair opened the contest with a double over first, and, after English had popped to Terry, came home on Cuyler's single to center. Wilson then hit into a double play.

The Cubs' second inning started with a pass to Stephenson, who stopped at second on Grimm's single to left. Hartnett dropped a Texas leaguer in right, filling the bases, and Beck walked, forcing in Stevie. Bush was called out on strikes, but Blair singled to center to score Grimm and Hartnett. English and Cuyler flied to Leach.

Beck's Boot Hurts.

The Giants made three runs after two were out in the second inning, and they all were unearned. Ott beat out an infield hit and went to second while English was throwing out O'Farrell. Jackson supplied the second out. Then Beck took a lusty kick at Roettger's easy grounder, Ott scoring. Fitzsimmons walked. Critz singled to center, scoring Roettger. The runners advanced on a wild pitch, and when Leach bounced a single off Bush's shins Fitzsimmons scored. Lindstrom rolled out to Grimm.

The Giants also made three runs after two were out in the third. O'Farrell walked, Jackson and Roettger singled, filling the bases, and Pinch Batter Hogan doubled, clearing the bases.

The fourth was the time of the riot, in which Shealy had to stay in and take it. It wasn't much of a ball game after that.

BLUE LARKSPUR NEARS ALL TIME MONEY RECORD

Victory in Handicap Will Send Him Past Fox.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Within another week Blue Larkspur may race on past Gallant Fox and become the second highest money winning horse of all time. He can do this by winning the $35,000 added Arlington handicap to be run next Saturday afternoon and if he wins the stake he will be within a few hundred dollars of Zev's record of $313,000, which has prevailed for several years.

Blue Larkspur came out of his Arlington Cup victory in such good condition that Trainer Dick Thompson yesterday was ready to begin pointing him for the handicap. It was also reported that Owner Bradley was inclined to have him go in the handicap, but a final decision will not be made until today or tomorrow.

Will Carry 127 Pounds.

In the handicap Blue Larkspur will have the top weight and will carry 128 pounds. Sun Beau will get in at 124, Misstep at 124, Petee Wrack at 123, and Toro at 123. But a lot of other horses which do not fancy too much weight will be in the contest under much lighter imposts. For instance, Joseph E. Widener's Curate will carry 108 pounds and he is considered a dangerous contender.

Gallant Knight gets in at 108 and his race behind Gallant Fox in the Classic with 126 pounds up indicates he ought to fly with 18 pounds less in the saddle. Plucky Play, which recently won by a wide margin, will be asked to carry only 101 pounds. Paul Bunyan, Snowflake, Stars and Bars, Pigeon Hole, Lativich, and Live Oak are others that will have a feather on their backs.

Unlike the weight for age cup race which found only five accepting the issue the handicap which is also at a mile and a quarter will draw from 15 to 18 starters and it may have a gross value of $45,000. To make it possible for Blue Larkspur to go past Zev's record the race will have to be worth $41,000 to the winner and of course Blue Larkspur would have to win it. Should he capture the handicap his share would hardly total that amount. But he would be so close to Zev's mark that a victory in an overnight handicap later would let him go on to the front.

Has Earned $272,070.

Following his Cup victory Blue Larkspur had earned $272,070. Gallant Fox's money winning record is $274,000. So it seems likely that Blue Larkspur, and not Gallant Fox, will be the first to break Zev's record.

J. Marcum displaced Earl Steffen for the lead among the jockeys at Arlington Park by riding four winners to Steffen's two. Marcum now leads with 14 winners during the meeting, one more than Steffen. Jockey A. Richard brought six of his mounts home in front last week to take third place with 11 winners. The standing of the leading jockeys, including Saturday's races, follows:

J. Marcum	14	D. Trivett	7
E. Steffen	13	G. DePeso	6
A. Richard	11	R. Finnerty	5
L. Schaefer	8	J. Leyland	5
E. Watters	7	G. Riley	5
J. Smith	7

The Lake Villa purse at a mile for 3 year olds and upward and the Fox River purse, also at a mile, will feature today's Arlington card. In the Lake Villa, Hot Toddy, Uncommon Gold, Cantankerous, Jock, Canaan, Boom, and Milton Moore are to see action. The Fox River drew the Audley Farm stable's Flyer. E. K. Bryson's Jimmy Moran, S. W. Labrot's Fortunate Youth, Alderman Coughlin's Outer Harbor, and a half dozen other good performers.

LAWRENCE TIBBETT

The higher they come, the harder they fall . . . was Hollywood's greeting to Lawrence Tibbett. Then came "The Rogue Song" and Tibbett landed, in just one jump, among the half dozen leading stars of the screen.

A quick triumph? Not at all! Nature gave him that glorious voice.

That's why OLD GOLD makes no claims . . . of factory skill . . . or secret processes. For Nature alone deserves the credit. The sun, the rain, the fertile soil simply produced better tobaccos. That's why O. G.'s thrill your taste . . . why they give you new throat-ease.

From an unknown in the "Talkies" to a box-office triumph . . . that's what Nature did for Tibbett. From a tyro-brand to a great success . . . that's what Nature did for OLD GOLD.

MOON MULLINS—THE TREASURE HUNT

although none of the players on my club would believe it. They felt he could win a game whenever he felt in the mood.

"I used him sparingly, only when I felt I was in a tight spot. About two weeks before I wanted him to pitch I would go to him and say: 'Howard, it looks like you are through. I am sorry to do it, but I guess I'll have to ask waivers on you.' Ehmke then would plead that I give him another chance, that he still could pitch winning ball. Usually he came through. His great desire was to play in a world series and he knew that he at last was on a club that was sure to make the grade.

"When we started our last swing around the west I omitted Ehmke's name from the list of players named for the trip. I told him I didn't think he could do us much good on the mound, but he might be able to do some valuable work as a scout. I asked him to watch the Cubs in their series with the Phillies. We knew then that the Cubs were to be our opponent in the world series.

"After winding up our schedule in the east we headed for Chicago to play the Cubs. Ehmke was taken along. The morning of the opening game at Wrigley field I called my players together in a hotel room for a final discussion of our battle plans. They all expected that I would announce who would be the pitching choice. But I didn't. After the session Ehmke came to me and said: 'What are you thinking about a pitcher for today's game?' I told him I hadn't given it any thought. 'What are you thinking about it?' I inquired. 'I can go in and win that game for you,' he replied.

"All right, you are the man," Connie told him after warning him to keep his appointment secret.

Ehmke's achievement that day will live in baseball history. Never before had a world series pitcher struck out 13 batsmen.

"I knew that he would never last nine innings against the Cubs again," Connie explained. "If you remember, I had Walberg ready to step in."

Ehmke lasted three and two-thirds innings. That was his last effort in the majors. The arm that lasted just long enough to satisfy Ehmke's ambition to win a world series game was gone.

Sox Win Pair from Boston, 16-4 and 5-4

the home Sox went daffy from the heat or something and rolled up a bunch of five more. Into this needy rally they threw successive doubles by Jolley, Barnes and Cissell, a single by Ryan and a triple by Watwood. The latter didn't find it necessary to stop at third. He kept right on going because Reeves relayed wild on the return throw. Boston then picked up one in the ninth on hits by Rothrock and Todt.

SECOND GAME

A string of five scoreless innings in the nightcap was broken in the sixth when Boston took a one run lead which proved fleeting. Smith, the hostile hurler, led off the session with a double down the left field line. Oliver followed with a tap to Caraway and Smith should have been an easy victim for a play at third, but Cecil Pat's throw to Ryan was so wild that it sailed down into left field. Smith scored on the error, and Oliver tried to sneak as far as third, but Jolley recovered the loose ball and heaved it to Ryan in time to catch the runner. Caraway had no trouble with the next two hitters.

Sox Take Lead.

The Chicago hose promptly assumed a temporary lead by scoring a pair in their half of the sixth. The inning began profitably with Jolley's double and a pass to Barnes. Cissell lined a single over short, scoring Jolley and also knocking a nail from the bare hand of Hal Rhyne. Ryan lifted a fly back of second and Regan dropped it, but recovered in time to force Cissell at second. This started Donie Bush to arguing about the infield fly rule, but Ump. Hildebrand thought it too hot to pay attention to minor details, so he told Bush to leave the field. Crouse then forced Ryan and Barnes ran home.

Webb was the first Red Hose wearer to appear against Caraway in the seventh. He sent a long single to right center. Durst flied out and Miller added a hit. Then Reeves, who had supplanted Rhyne at short knocked Caraway right out of the battle with his homer, which slipped into the left field seats to give the visitors a 4 to 2 lead for a few minutes.

One hit was all that Bush's Sox used in getting the two tying runs in the home seventh. Watwood led off and after three balls had been pitched to him by Smith, the mound job was turned over to Gaston, who completed the pass. Mulleavy's offering was only a fly ball. Reynolds, however, lined to right and the ball bounced almost back to the infield for a triple, Watwood scoring. Reynolds dashed home with the tying tally on Jolley's fly to center. Then came the winning ninth.

Business Sins Begin to Tell on Baseball Magnates Now

worthy person or he was a great man and a hero had been wrongfully taken from them.

McKechnie Lost Job.

Bill McKechnie was exalted for winning another pennant and removed from his job for losing the world series to the Yankees, and it is possible that patrons, after that, decided never to permit themselves to become excited over any baseball character again. Furthermore, the Cardinals were not playing very well early in the present season and the customers, noting this, may have grown a bit despondent and formed other recreational habits for relief.

The Browns, of course, have no call on the patronage of the customers for they, also, have been governed by whimsical and erratic business office management and it has been some years since they possessed any character as a team.

But, as long as the Browns remain members of the league, the other firms are compelled to call on them in the regular routine of business, sometimes without doing enough trade to pay their traveling expenses.

The Yankees in a recent game against the Browns in St. Louis played to an audience composed almost entirely of a band and a battalion of R. O. T. C. soldiers who had entered by the complimentary gate. The Washington team, then leading the American league, was paid off on a basis of less than 1,600 paid admissions for two games, but, playing in Boston a short time later the Senators and Red Sox drew 14,000 cash admissions on a weekday.

Draw $1,500 in 4 Days.

The Braves and Cardinals drew $1,700 in two days in St. Louis. In Pittsburgh, the Braves played to $1,500 in four days. The Brooklyn Robins drew $800 one day and $500 another there.

These are fragmentary figures obtained from two managers, but I am assured that they are representative and, very curiously, it transpires that the two Boston clubs, both playing in the second division with no hope of winning either pennant, are among the most prosperous in the business this year. The Braves drew 43,120 paid admissions on a recent Sunday, the greatest paid attendance ever drawn at a ball game in Boston.

The Brooklyn ball park was built to modest expectations, with a capacity of only 30,000 although the late Charlie Ebbetts, who constructed the plant, was fond of saying that the baseball business was in its infancy. A few days ago, the Robins not only filled the park but turned away about 20,000 addicts who wished to be customers and if there is any sight that saddens a magnate more than the sight of empty chairs in a ball yard it is the sight of patrons turning away from closed turnstiles, wondering what to do with their money.

The magnates cannot understand why the crowds turn out to watch the two Boston clubs and shun others which are doing better, but I suspect that errors in the higher management have been more responsible than defeats on the ball ground for the disaffection in St. Louis and Pittsburgh. Given to understand that baseball was strictly a private business and the heroes mere employés not much above the rank of groundkeeper, the patrons lost their illusions and baseball ceased to be a cause commanding their devotion, their presence and their support.

SPARTA DEFEATS MEXICAN ARMY SOCCER TEAM, 3-2

For the second successive Sunday the invading Mexican army soccer team succumbed before a Chicago eleven yesterday, losing to Sparta, 3 to 2.

The Mexicans had an advantage of a strong wind at their back and as a result led at the half time, 2 to 1. The game had just started when Camarena put the invaders in the lead with a goal and Lozano made it two. Kratochvil broke through the Mexicans' defense to score Sparta's first tally.

SEE BIG WHEAT MOVEMENT IN NEXT 30 DAYS

Southwest Run Is About Over.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat prices are down to a level where cash interests are endeavoring to buy the new wheat at increasing discounts under the September delivery, as they expect a heavy movement for the next thirty days.

Estimated arrivals for today are 542 cars at Chicago, which will go largely on previous sales. Kansas City is also to have a big run and the visible supply is estimated to show a large increase for the week.

The big run of wheat in southern Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas is over, as indicated by loadings of 6,705 cars on the Santa Fe system for the week ended June 18, as compared with 10,285 cars the previous week and 12,105 last year. Since June 15 the Santa Fe and Rock Island railroads have loaded practically 51,000 cars in the southwest, as compared with 54,000 cars last year.

New Rush of Wheat.

This movement, combined with that of other southwestern railroads, suggests an aggregate of around 100,000,000 bu of wheat. This wheat has gone to the Gulf, to Kansas City, the northwest and to mill elevators scattered throughout the southwest and middle west. The greater part of this does not appear in the visible supply. A new rush of wheat is coming from northern Kansas, Nebraska, which had a big crop, and the middle west, and it is expected to be heavy and last two to three weeks. At the end of the big movement of winter wheat the trade will be confronted with the beginning of the spring wheat marketing in the northwest.

Canadian crop prospects have been lowered and estimates on the western provinces range from 350,000,000 to 425,000,000 bu, compared with 275,000,000 bu last year.

Every day the heat and drought continues means a reduction in crop yields. Another factor in the northwest is the appearance of black rust, particularly in western Kansas, but there have been no statements to show material crop injury.

Wheat Levels Low.

Wheat prices are at a level where bears hesitate to press sales on breaks and large speculators who believe that prices are low enough, are careful not to load up on bulges. Every advance of ½c or more brings opposition from hedging interests, also from cash handlers who are buying wheat freely and hedging it by sales of September and December. There is also buying of September and selling of December at 6c spread.

The latest reports from Europe indicate heavy losses in the French and Italian crops from rains which are causing damage as harvesting is on. Foreigners bought wheat more freely last week than at any time of late and are taking both cash and futures. Stock traders who sold wheat recently against their holdings of securities are said to have covered their short wheat.

A strikingly different price situation exists now, as compared with a year ago. Values are around the lowest of the season, while a year ago they were at the highest being off 53 to 57 cents. When everything is summarized in the world's wheat

Reviews Developments in Petroleum Industry

BY SCRUTATOR.

So much is happening in the oil industry nowadays that it is difficult to keep up with developments.

One of the most spectacular of these has been the betterment of scientific treatment of crude oil. Back in 1914, which bids fair to be regarded in history as he beginning of a new era of efficiency, gasoline consumption was thirty million barrels in the United States. In 1929 it had risen to 372 million barrels.

The amount of crude oil required for the production did not increase at the same rate. If it had, we should have had to take twice as much crude from the earth as we actually did last year. From 20 per cent recovery of gasoline from crude there was a rise to 40 per cent or more. Now processes, notably the one having as a basis the artificial addition of hydrogen to the crude, promise to raise the recovery point much higher.

Would Mean Reversal.

As it is, about half the world's production of petroleum is still being marketed in the form of heavy fuel oil. Some observers have held that this is economically wrong and that the oil supply, being limited in its easily accessible form, should be conserved by transforming all possible into motor fuel. This would involve the substitution of coal for many of the uses to which heavier oils are now put. Incidentally, that would mean a back track in history, as these uses are largely the ones in which oil was substituted for coal.

Petroleum furnished an instance to prove the adage that production of raw materials is not profitable. Experts have asserted, with some show of evidence, that it has cost more to bring the crude to the surface than it was worth. The money has been made in refining and marketing, and the integration of the industry, or the complete control of the product from the recesses of the earth to the consumer's tank, has made many companies rich.

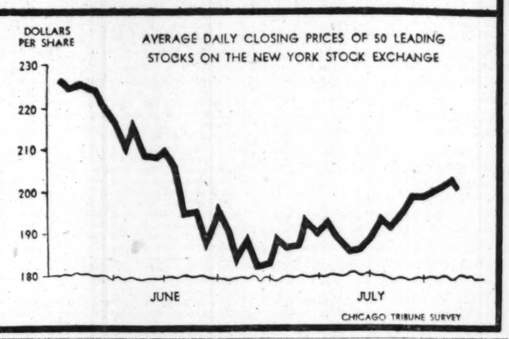
The outstanding feature in industrial life today, in the face of a general depression, is the manner in which pipes to transport oil and its closest friend, natural gas, are being extended. Already there are 100,000 miles of oil pipe alone, and the reviews all point out that the pipe making companies are enjoying a period of unusual prosperity.

Pushes Conservation.

Conservation in the industry, which is now capitalized at more than twelve billion dollars, is being pushed by the American Petroleum institute. Fields once believed depleted have been reopened and have yielded a second crop.

Efforts have been made to find ways within the law by which agreements to bring out oil only as it can be marketed profitably can be made. But competition is so keen in this line, once held to be a Standard monopoly, that the agreement feature has so far accomplished little.

RISE IN SECURITY MARKETS CONTINUED LAST WEEK



GROUP OF RUSSIANS STUDY FORD METHODS OF MASS PRODUCTION

Detroit, Mich., July 20.—(AP)—As part of the comprehensive plan of the soviet government to increase the industrial, mining, agricultural and chemical productivity of the former land of the czars, a group of 144 Russian engineers and workers are learning American mass production methods in the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor company. Among them is one woman, a metallurgist, interested in the heat treatment of steel. Along with men employés she is working in the Ford steel mills.

The agreement between Ford interests and the soviet government provides for the intensive training of Russian engineers and workers in practically all departments of the company, As soon as they have completed their studies they will return to Russia and their places here will be taken by others. Fourteen who came here with the first group in July a year ago already have returned and ten of the 144 now here will return this month. Eventually 500 Russians will have spent an average of not less than six months each in the plant.

Part of the great industrialization plan of the soviets is the erection by the government of the Autostroy plant near Nijni Novgórod on the Volga river. S. Bondarchik, head of the group of Russians now here, said today that the production of automobile parts should be well under way in the Autostroy plant by the end of next year.

When completed the Autostroy plant will have a capacity of 140,000 cars annually and it will be designed that production can be extended to 300,000 cars annually.

"The Russian engineers and technicians who are here are employés of Autostroy, which translated means automobile builders," said Mr. Bondarchik. "However, there are some from the other soviet trusts, such as electricians, textile engineers, rubber experts and so on. Each man is engaged in the studies relating to his own work and when he completes them he returns to Russia."

D. & R. G. W. IS READY TO BUILD CUT-OFF LINE

New York, July 20.—Announcement by the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad that it was prepared to build the Dotsero cutoff so as to extend its line over a route from Denver to Salt Lake City has served to call attention to a number of important pieces of railroad construction planned or in progress. Although the total of railroad mileages tends to decline from year to year, there are occasional extentions to improve service or provide new service.

The Rio Grande announcement was made at a hearing on its application to control the Denver & Salt Lake railway by Henry McAllister, chief counsel. The Salt Lake has a lease on the Moffat tunnel, but, because of a dispute over the rental, Mr. McAllister said his road was prepared to build another tunnel as a last resort.

The controversy is heightened by the fact that supporters of the Moffat tunnel road would have that road build the cutoff. Under these circumstances the Rio Grande is not prepared to set a definite date for the construction to start.

Says 21 Steamers to Dock with Raw Silk in August

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—Twenty-one steamers will dock at west coast ports with cargos of raw silk for delivery in August, the Silk Association of America announced.

Gilt Edged Bonds Enjoy Preference

New York, July 20.—(AP)—Despite the great volume of funds seeking profitable employment pending business recovery, investors show little disposition to buy anything but gilt edged issues in the listed bond market.

The movement of fixed income securities on the New York Stock Exchange last week served to bring out the market preference displayed for long term investments of only the highest type. After the marked strength and increased activity with which the bond market opened the month the dealings last week suffered by comparisons, although improvement in standard rail and utility issues continued quietly in a thin market.

Supply Appears Slim.

With the demand centered in this class of bonds, the supply available at present levels, which are close to the highest of the year, appeared to be slim. Banks, insurance companies and other corporations, which are doing most of the buying, are reluctant to indulge in brisk bidding as prime investment issues have shown a quick response to even nominal accumulation.

The quietness of the demand for gilt edged bonds is ascribed to wariness on the part of banks and other institutions which seem to feel that the extreme ease of money has about run its course and that firmer credit will be effected by the usual seasonal demand for credit and currency to finance crops and autumn business.

Money Rates Steady.

Money rates were little changed from a week ago. Time money rates showed a firmer tone, with slight advances for longer periods, but call money shifted from 2 to 2½ per cent.

Despite that fact the volume of trading was more reminiscent of summer days when conditions were far less encouraging. Secondary and speculative issues continue to give a ragged performance and the desultory movement is accentuated at times by profit taking in the better grade issues.

A quiet constructive trend was maintained by the popular foreign bonds and to this group was added the Austrian 7 per cent loan of 1930. The $25,000,000 American portion of the $55,000,000 issue was reported to have received a less cordial reception than the large German 5½ per cent loan, but was oversubscribed here in contrast with the reception given it in London, where a large portion was left in the hands of underwriters.

The offering here was the largest of the week, the total for which was $85,700,000, compared with $146,710,000 in the second week of July.

WITH SALES SHOWING INCREASES, STEP UP IN AUTO OUTPUT IS SEEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—With sales, both domestic and foreign, showing steady increases, and production almost at a standstill, observers of the automobile industry expect manufacturers in this line to start by the end of this month on a steadily increasing schedule of production.

Government figures showed sales both in this country and abroad in May declined less when compared with 1929 than any other month. Most of the factories, including the Ford Motor company, are observing a two week shutdown this month, and when operations are resumed it is expected that the industry will have nearly depleted stocks.

When comparing production and sales April and May of this year show an excess of sales over production as compared with an excess of production over sales in the same two months of 1929. At the end of May surplus stock of cars in manufacturers' hands from the monthly outputs stood at 112,103, as compared with 353,301 at the same time last year. These figures are arrived at through subtracting the total of sales and exports as furnished by the companies from their announced production schedules.

Unknown factors such as stocks and carryovers, and cars assembled abroad from American made parts, make this figure merely comparative for the two years rather than representative of an actual stock on hand at the end of May of each year. It is probable that unsold cars were far less in number for both years.

Executives point out that unless there is a drastic drop in sales during the remainder of this month, and none of them anticipate any such happening, stocks in dealers' hands and carryovers will be practically depleted by the time the present shutdowns of the principal manufacturers are completed. Because of the shutdowns July is expected to show the smallest production of any month of this year.

Notes Pick Up in Demand for Electrical Equipment

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—Demand in the market for electrical equipment and apparatus took a slight turn for the better in principal buying centers during the last week, Electrical World reports. According to sectional reports, there has been a noticeable pickup in the call for various items, with railway electrification materials occupying a prominent place in immediate business.

COMBINATION OF EVENTS AFFECT TRADE COURSE

But Whither Moves Stock Market?

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, July 20.—The appearance in the stock market of pool operations for the rise, publication of a number of earnings reports for the first half of the year, and the start of what promises to be an extensive movement of gold out of this country were the principal developments of importance bearing upon the financial markets last week.

To these might be added the clarification of the government's position relative to the wheat market, supplied by dispatches from Washington stating that no more wheat would be purchased by the farm board until there had been a curtailment of production.

While the activities of newly formed speculative groups gave a fillip to the stock market recovery in certain directions, it also served to make the immediate future of the market somewhat more obscure. The success or failure attendant upon the operations of such pools will obviously have an important bearing upon the extent and duration of the advance and still more upon the character of the subsequent decline, should the rally fail to hold.

Favor Advance.

Thus far technical conditions within the market have strongly favored the rise. Renewed selling has been attracted, however, both for profit taking and in speculation for the decline. Should the pressure of this selling prove sufficient this week to turn stock prices downward, the pools which have lately provided additional strength may prove the greatest source of weakness.

On the whole, earnings reports for the first six months of the year which have thus far appeared have been better than expected. But as yet only a handful of important companies have made public their returns. These uniformly show a falling off from the per share earnings of the first half of 1929. The decline is by no means as drastic as was freely predicted and does not appear to have jeopardized dividends.

Last week's showings of the earn-

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—Following the recent period of price cutting and curtailed production in the radio industry, set manufacturers are now in a sounder position than at any time in the last twelve months, a current survey by Standard Statistics says. The survey adds that the outlook for 1931 indicates a resumption of the rapid growth witnessed immediately to the current recession in general business.

Have you ever thought

and how hard it would be to get along without it?

THE average American family uses 10c worth of electricity a day. For the average family,

10c buys the food for only . . . 1 hour
10c pays the rent for only . . 1½ hours
10c buys the clothing for only 2 hours
10c runs the automobile for only 2 miles

but

10c buys the electricity for 24 hours

Use electricity freely. It saves your eyes, your health, your strength, your time . . . And it costs so little.

Associated residential customers use 11.5% more than last year.

Residential customers of the Associated System are more and more realizing the economy, comfort and convenience of using electricity freely. They now use 11.5% more than a year ago—for lighting, for cooking, for toasting, for ironing, for cooling, for cleaning, for numberless tasks.

On the Associated low energy rate, electricity for the numerous uses and appliances is really very cheap, encouraging customers to use it freely.

situation, the fact stands out that the bull is up against carrying charges which have been hard to beat for the last year.

Trading Increased.

Speculative trading in wheat has materially increased within the last week, but is smaller than a year ago, when sales of futures were around the record, 751,919 bu, while in the past week they were 278,859 bu.

Prices had a range of 5c for the week, with net gains of 5½ to 5¾c. July closed at 90@99¼c and March 103¾@104. Prices for the week follow:

Heat Damages Corn.

Temperatures of over 100 in the leading corn belt states during the last week are said to have damaged the corn crop materially, as there has been practically no rain and the plant in many sections is suffering from lack of moisture. These conditions have brought in increased speculative buying, particularly in December, which advanced from 68⅝c to 76 1-3c, mostly in the last two days, with the close 75⅝c, a net gain of 7¼c over the previous week's finish, while other months were up 5¾c. July acted tight and closed at 83c, with September 81¼@81¾c. Corn prices were within 6c of wheat and are considered relatively high but speculators ignore this factor, owing to unfavorable crop conditions. Prices for the week follow:

Good Support for Oats.

Oats are receiving good support from cash and speculative interests and spreaders. Strength in other grains has also been a factor in bringing new buying into the market. Harvesting is well under way and two cars of new oats have reached the market, showing good weight and low moisture content. July closed at 35¾c, September, 38@38¼c, December, 40⅝@40¾c, March 41@41¾c. Prices follow:

Rye Market Wakes Up.

Increased buying of rye, with spreading operations between Chicago and the northwest, also purchases by easterners and foreigners, and the first export business of consequence for more than a year made a more active market, with net gains of 8⅝ to 9c for the week. July closed at 56c; September, 59½c; December, 65c, and March, 69¾c.

LARD GAINS FRIENDS

Buying of distant lard futures, attributed to eastern and foreign speculators and cash interests, combined with the late advance in hogs and grains, gave the provision market a better tone and lard closed with net gains of 27½c to 35c for the week. Increased offerings of dry salted clear bellies, as a result of larger hog output, caused a drop of 35c to 62½c, as compared with a week ago. Hog values, although lower in the week, advanced and closed around the top. Prices for the week follow:

American-La France and Foamite.

Please give me any figures you have on the American-La France and Foamite corporation stock, number of shares, capital, surplus and indebtedness, if any, or any information you may have concerning same.—H. L. F.

American-La France and Foamite corporation manufactures motor fire apparatus, chemical engines, fire extinguishers, fire protection systems, etc.

Net income, available for dividends in 1929, was $187,156, against $412,803 in 1928, and a loss of $565,303 in 1927.

Last year's earnings were less than half the dividend requirements on 58,000 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock [par $100]. There were also outstanding 609,300 shares of no par common and a funded debt of $3,400,000. Interest charges were earned 2.52 times in 1929. In 1928 preferred dividends were barely covered, leaving 1 cent per share for the common.

For the first two quarters of the current year the company reported net losses of $66,322 and $45,282, respectively, against net loss of $47,262 and net profit of $126,600 in the first two quarters of 1929.

Financial position at the close of 1929 was strong. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was approximately 13 to 1 and working capital amounted to $5,200,739, against $7,825,326 a year before. Surplus was $718,428.

On Jan. 1, 1930, accrued unpaid preferred dividends amounted to 15¾ per cent. No payments have been made on the common since Feb. 15, 1927. Both classes of stock are speculative.

A. M. Castle.

Please inform me as to the underlying business, past record, and future outlook, in your opinion, of A. M. Castle & Co.—B. E. E.

A. M. Castle & Co. is engaged in the merchandising of iron and steel throughout the central and Pacific coast states and in addition is exclusive representative for a number of steel producers.

Net income in 1929 was $847,826, equal to $7.07 per share on 120,000 capital shares [par $10], against $711,341 in 1928, and $419,415 in 1927.

Although the company's business in the first six months of 1930 was unusually quiet, earnings were sufficient to cover the regular quarterly dividends of 75 cents per share and the extra.

Net income was $240,000, or $2 per share. In 1929 slightly more than half of the year's profits were made in the first six months.

At the close of 1929 current assets were $3,753,161, and current liabilities were $421,851.

TRUE AGGREGATE RAIL VALUATIONS ARE THREATENED

Commodities' Drop Is Factor.

Washington, D. C., July 20.—(AP)—The $10,600,000,000 difference of opinion as to the true aggregate value of American railroads which long has existed between the government and the railroad companies is now facing a real threat to its continued existence. This was a view generally entertained in Washington government quarters most concerned as well as in some railroad circles.

The great and sustained drop in commodity prices witnessed in the last year, with its possible effects on wages and salaries, is the novel economic factor which now is considered to be foreshadowing a reconciliation in the important controversy.

Faced with the task of finding a figure to represent the actual capital value of railroads—an essential point in determining reasonable rates and areas for rail service—the interstate commerce commission after many years of inventory and study adopted a basis that roughly values the national transport machine as worth twenty-four billion dollars. A factor in this estimate was the use of wage levels, prices, and material costs as they were in 1914 to determine the costs of production of the whole immense structure.

The railroads, viewing among other things the long ascension in prices, wages, and costs which took place after 1914, instituted immediate and somewhat successful contest against this figure.

Their fight culminated when the Supreme court in a decision entered in the test case of the St. Louis and O'Fallon railroad, which was sometimes referred to as "the greatest lawsuit in history," conceded somewhat of the railroads' argument. At least, the interstate commerce commission was ordered to go at the valuation problem again, and to give more weight to the factor of reproduction costs in fixing its total.

Aggregate to $36,000,000,000.

Using prices, costs, and wages of 1920 and later years for fixing the reproduction costs, the roads' aggregate value probably would run to $36,000,000,000, though the exact figure never has been authoritatively determined. The commission and the railroad representatives have since the O'Fallon decision gone into the subject deeply, but have not yet been able to reach any new determination.

In the interim the great 1929-30 drop in commodity prices has intervened, and members of the commission have been quick to emphasize its importance to the settlement. If the costs of reproducing the present railroad property is going to settle down again to what it was in 1914—though that is far from sure—the ground hitherto taken in the valuation argument is destroyed.

Progress of the current commodity price adjustments, however, is now being followed most closely by the commission members grappling with the problems, and present an entirely novel influence upon the situation.

WHOLESALE EGG PRICES AT THEIR TEN YEAR LOWS

Wholesale egg prices are at the lowest levels touched in the last ten years, a survey made by Harry H. Field, president of the Chicago Mercantile exchange, reveals. Prices are around 10 cents under levels on the same date last year, about 6 cents under the ten year average, and nearly 20 cents under the high marks set in July, 1920.

Previous low prices were set in 1922 and 1926, the quotations at that time being about one cent higher than those of Saturday's market. In 1920, wholesale eggs were quoted at around 40 cents. The July ten year average for wholesale prices on firsts was 28.14 cents, compared to quotations of 21@21½ cents Saturday.

Retail prices last year were proportionately higher, quotations in the chain stores being around 37 to 40 cents, compared to 30 to 32 cents now.

Chief among reasons for the present low levels, Mr. Field says, is the enormous amount of eggs in storage and on the market, as compared to a year ago. The generally low commodity values also indirectly affects the trade. However, the trend in receipts during last week has been lessening and it is felt that, in time, the oversupply should be absorbed.

OIL INDUSTRY WORKS TOWARD COMPLETE UNIT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 20.—Owing to the economic changes that have been taking place in the oil industry during the last few years, there is now a marked tendency on the part of the larger companies to work as rapidly as possible toward becoming a complete unit in the industry, with a crude oil output and transportation system commensurate with refining capacity and market outlets.

As a result of the extreme competition in the industry, economic necessity demands that every company obtain as near as possible all the profits from either of these breaks, which, it is stated, is the real reason for the various mergers that have either taken place or are under contemplation in the industry.

The consolidations of oil companies are not for the purpose of building up anything resembling
